Lewis Stays Away From New WLB Meet

CONTINUES TO SNUB EFFORTS OF U. S. PANEL

Ickes Prepared To Seize Coal For War Plant Operation If Necessary.

DIMOUT PLAN DELAYED

Transportation Ban Also Held Up Pending Possibility of New Strike.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — A War Labor Board panel resumed hearings in the national coal dispute today without benefit of cooperation from John L. Lewis.

Representatives of both northern and southern coal operators appeared for the closed session, which started at 10 a. m., but no officials of Lewis' United Mine Workers appeared.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— The War Labor Board, defied again by John L. Lewis, today moved to make the American public the jury to decide the wage controversy between the United Mine Workers union and the nation's soft coal operators.

A three man panel of the WLB, assigned to conduct hearings in the case, threw its session open to the public with the announcement that the step was being taken "so that the public will have full knowledge" of what transpires.

The UMW snub, the latest in a long series, did not surprise anyone. The panel, meanwhile, had little hope of completing its hearings before the 15-day coal strike truce ends May 19.

But the government is preparing for any eventualities.

Solid Fuels Administrator Harold L. Ickes signed an order last night enabling him to seize coal, if necessary, to protect war plants and essential civilian users from shortages.

War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson is delaying consideration of a recommendation for a national dimout pending the outcome of the

Intermission In Tunisia--- By Ernie Pyle

How American infantrymen, exhausted by four days of battle, regain their strength in a two-day rest at the front is described by Ernie Pyle today in another of his series of articles on the experiences of a crack Yank unit.

"The startling thing to me about these rest periods," he says, "is how quickly the human body can recuperate from critical exhaustion, how rapidly the human mind snaps back to the normal state of laughing, grousing, yarn-spinning, and yearning for home."

Dad Draft to Start on Big Scale Aug. 1

Hershey Announces New Step; Meet on Farmers Here Tonight.

State selective service headquarters in Washington and Mansfield prepared today to take important steps vitally affecting the draft status of fathers and farmers.

In Washington, preliminary steps for the wholesale drafting of fathers probably around Aug. 1 were outlined by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director of selective service.

In Mansfield, members of the four selective service boards in the area were scheduled to meet tonight with state representatives of selective service and the agricultural war board for a discussion of the draft as it affects farmers.

Major Victor C. Reese, here to inspect and advise with local board clerks, will remain for tonight's session with Edward S. Meese, of state selective service headquarters, and Chris Kamrad, of the state war board, expected to attend. Ashland county board members as well as those from Richland county's three boards have been invited.

Local board clerks had not been informed yet today of the orders pertaining to the drafting of fathers. Gen. Hershey's instructions called for all employers engaged in war production or an activity essential to the war effort to pro-

Victory Gardeners Get Chance to Win War Stamp Prizes

Mansfield and Richland county Victory gardeners who will soon be bragging about the size and quality of their radishes and peas will get a chance to win war savings stamps with their vegetables.

A contest designed to stimulate interest in gardening and show the best methods of growing gardens was announced today by the Richland county Victory Garden committee. First prizes of one dollar in war stamps will be awarded in 18 classifications of vegetables while ribbons will go to second and third prize winners.

Prize money was provided by the Johnny Appleseed Garden club which gave the Victory Garden committee a $50 cash gift to promote gardening.

Prizes will be awarded first for the earliest and best radishes and peas, usually the gardener's first crops. The amateur gardeners who bring the first bunch of six outstanding radishes and the first quart of peas in the hulls to the county agent's office at the courthouse will win a dollar's worth of stamps for each display.

BRICKER PUTS TAX REPEALER IN CAMPAIGN

Sharply Rebuffed By House Panel, Governor Makes Defeat an Issue.

PROMISES VETOES

Senate OK's New Surtax on Industries Whose Payrolls Have Mushroomed.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Governor Bricker, sharply rebuffed by refusal of a house committee to approve his proposed $8,000,000 sales tax repeal on restaurant meals, today indicated he was willing to leave the verdict to the taxpaying voters.

"This measure, having passed the senate unanimously, should have been submitted to the house for a vote," he said when advised the house taxation committee voted 8 to 7 against recommending house passage after loading the measure with additional amendments.

"In this whole controversy I have always had in mind the interests of the taxpayer who carries the burden of government," Bricker said, commenting upon insistence of house leaders that the tax revenues be saved to increase a postwar surplus in the state treasury.

"This tax reduction would benefit more people than any other reduction within the amount available and still leave the state in a sound financial position," he said.

Administration spokesmen said the issue now was in the hands of the voters and predicted it would be an important issue in the next election.

Democrats reportedly were considering an initiated referendum for a constitutional amendment which would exempt restaurant meals from the sales tax, to be voted upon in the 1944 election.

Friends of the governor conceded the house action was the first

Threatened CD Resignations Bring Quick Action by City

Threats of Mansfield civilian defense workers to resign their posts because they have waited eight weeks for equipment that never was ordered from the state had brought prompt action today with Mayor W. J. Locke as city OCD chairman approving an order for $177 worth of arm bands and insignia for air raid wardens, fire-watchers, and block workers.

The whereabouts of a "previous order" for a larger quantity of the same equipment remained a mystery, however, with the mayor and Mrs. John Pierce, OCD secretary, unable to account for the order.

Mayor Locke approved an order today, but said he doubted that the state council would approve it without a list of the OCD workers who will use the materials. No list of workers has been compiled.

The mayor was told in Columbus yesterday by J. L. Hubbell, state OCD staff executive, that it would be advisable to purchase arm bands and insignia for the qualified raid wardens and fire-watchers, but Hubbell said volunteer workers who have not received the necessary first aid training must wear a special "CD" trainees' band.

Meanwhile, J. J. Whalen, representing wardens and fire-watchers in the downtown area, called on the mayor today to urge prompt attention to the request for equipment.

Whalen also was expected to tell the mayor that the wardens and other OCD workers in the business district want a special downtown zone set up to enable

Mansfield Bombardier Missing After Big Raid Over Germany

A Mansfield bombardier aboard a flying fortress was missing today, apparently lost three weeks ago when 16 United States heavy bombers were downed in a daring daylight raid on Bremen, Nazi manufacturing center.

He is Second Lieutenant Jack D. Shaaber, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Downard, 195 East Third street. His wife, Helen, is a member of the WAAC at Daytona beach, Fla.

A telegram to Mr. and Mrs. Shaaber from the war department said Lieut. Shaaber was missing over the European area since April 17—the day U. S. forces raided the German Focke-Wulf fighter plane factory.

Lieut. Shaaber has been in the service for 10 years. He graduated as a bombardier last September at Victorville, Cal. He went overseas in January and had been sta

FINISH PLANS FOR 'E' AWARD AT H-K PLANT

Army, Navy Honor Employes at Ceremony Tomorrow as City Gets First Flag.

INSPECTION PLANNED

Guests To Be Conducted on Tour of New Addition Just Before Presentation.

Mansfield will join army and navy officials Friday in honoring the Hughes-Keenan company for its contribution to the war program as the firm becomes the first in the city to receive the Army-Navy "E" award.

Officers and employes of the Newman street industry proudly were preparing today for the ceremonies scheduled to open at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow. A new addition and entrance to the company's plant will be ready for first inspection by the public before the program gets under way.

Attendance for the plant inspection and subsequent ceremonies is limited to those receiving the 800 invitations sent out by the company and their guests. These include families of employes, manufacturers, trade affiliates and others.

One of Mansfield's smaller industries but one that has sent its war-time product to every fighting front where there are Americans, the Hughes-Keenan company earned the praise of the army and navy for the quality and quantity of its production of the Roustabout crane, used throughout the world.

The ceremonies, scheduled to last 32 minutes, will be staged on a platform in front of the plant if the weather is favorable. If it rains, activities will be moved into the new addition of the plant.

Major W. B. McClelland of the Cleveland ordnance district will present the "E" flag to Miss Marie Jacot, secretary of the company, and John S. Gerhart employe of the firm since late in 1909. G. W. Way, president of the company, will speak in acceptance of the award.

Limits Mansfield Taxi Driving; Cuts Number of Cabs

Mansfield taxi operators had been told today by the Office of Defense Transportation to limit their cabs to 54,000 miles each per year and reduce their licensed cabs to the number they had in operation last September.

Orders were issued yesterday during a conference of taxi proprietors with ODT officials, Service Safety Director Fred B. Wolff and Police Chief Meade K. Bates at the city building.

It was revealed at the meeting that a number of taxis in the city have been operated in excess of 54,000 miles annually and that some firms had been obtaining gas rations for more cabs than they actually operated, Chief Bates said. The taxi companies owned the cabs they listed, but not all of the cars were licensed for operation, he added.

Two ODT representatives at the session said the government requirements must be met to cut the use of cars, tires, and gasoline although some proprietors argued they would be unable to handle their business and stay within the regulations.

The ODT men, pointing out that Mansfield has more cabs than other Ohio cities of similar size, were told by operators that Mansfield is a "taxi-minded" city in which more passengers use cabs to save private cars.

Yank Infantry Strikes; Reds Threaten Base

Russian Fighters Crack Nazi Line On Front Near Novorossisk.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (AP) — The Red army has advanced "far beyond" Krymskaya in the Caucasus and now is storming new German fortifications, the Moscow radio reported today in a broadcast recorded here by the Soviet monitor.

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—The Red army was reported closing in on Novorossisk from the northeast today in a major offensive which had broken through the rim of the Kuban bridgehead on a 15½-mile front and threatened to envelop the Black sea naval base.

Russian troops had been fighting at the southern outskirts of Novorossisk throughout the winter and the new push of eight miles which netted 11 towns and killed more than 7,000 Axis soldiers posed the menace of envelopment against the key base in the northwest Caucasus.

In addition to Krymskaya, a strategic rail junction, the Russians seized Neberdjaiskaya, which controls the vital mountain pass 10 miles northeast of Novorossisk.

Stubbornly resisting the first heavy Russian attack since the end of the Red army's winter campaign, the Germans were falling back on Novorossisk as well as westward into the neck of the Taman peninsula.

Military quarters said the Axis army packed into the closing pocket of the Caucasus faced the alternative of a last ditch stand or a perilous flight by sea to the Crimea under the blows of the Red air force and the Black sea fleet.

The Red army command, in its Thursday mid-day communique, said advancing Soviet forces stormed and captured several more Axis strong points northeast of Novorossisk in violent fighting.

The Russians exacted a heavy toll of Axis troops and material in their latest advances, the Key Axis Defenses Crumbling Before Onslaught of Americans.

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa—American infantry and armor launched an offensive against the shell-pitted naval base of Bizerte early today after the British First army bayonets captured the key hill of Bou Aoukaz in the last range of hills fringing the plain west of Tunis.

At the same time, the British First army started a full-scale attack northeast of Medjez-El-Bab, battering the Axis defenses in the Tebourba sector with a 400-gun barrage while American troops slightly to the north pushed from Eddekhila to within less than six miles of Tebourba.

There were increasing indications that the Bizerte defenses were crumbling as the Americans took Djebel Cheniti and Djebel Achkel and threw armor against the junction of Ferryville.

Front dispatches said the Germans appeared to be falling back in the direction of Tunis and Cape Bon, suggesting that they would make their last big stand there rather than at Bizerte, which now is threatened with isolation.

American aviators reported that fires set by U. S. long-range artillery and by aerial bombs were burning in the Bizerte harbor area—about nine miles from the Allied advance lines—and front reports said the Germans were being forced back so rapidly that in some sectors they did not have time to lay big mine fields.

A dispatch from C. R. Cunningham, United Press correspondent with the Americans, said the American and French advances in the Cheniti hills, north of Lake Achkel, had broken through the last formidable barriers to Bizerte on the north.

The British artillery attack softened up the first objectives for the First army infantry. The attack hinged on Peter's Corners, a strong German point east of Medjez, and on the road running to-

TOJO: 'Japs Will Launch Big Offensive'; Allies Are Ready

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The navy today reported a bombing and strafing attack Tuesday on Japanese positions at Attu, westernmost of the Aleutian islands.

(By United Press)

Japan's long-awaited all-out offensive was promised anew by Premier Hideki Tojo today, but the Allies were believed ready to counter it from the Aleutians to the southwest Pacific.

Tojo, speaking at Manila during a trip to the Philippines, said Japan was prepared to deliver an "annihilating blow" from her conquered bastions. His speech climaxed a long series of threats by Japanese spokesmen and warnings from the Allies that an offensive was imminent.

A Berlin commentator, however, predicted an American drive to clear out the Aleutians and provide a jumping-off place for blows against Japan proper.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's fliers continued hammering enemy bases in the island fringe north of Australia, damaging three ships and setting off big explosions in a raid on Wewak, on the New Guinea north coast.

Tojo was quoted by radio Tokyo as recorded by the United Press in London:

"I want to express the Japanese conviction that the Anglo-Americans will be crushed so that they may no longer be able to intervene in the future in eastern Asiatic affairs."

A Transocean (German) news agency dispatch dated Tokyo and

STALIN: Russian Leader Makes Friendly Gesture Toward Poles

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—Premier Joseph Stalin was believed today to have made a gesture toward Russian-Polish reconciliation by categorically affirming that Russia desires both a "strong" and an "independent" Poland after the war.

He also laid down fundamentals for Soviet-Polish post war relations. They were: Good neighborliness and mutual respect or, if the Poles desire, a defensive alliance against their enemy, Germany.

His declaration was made at a time when there are no diplomatic relations between Russia and the Polish government in exile in London. Russia severed relations 10 days ago because the Polish government had asked the International Red Cross to investigate a Nazi propaganda charge that Russians had killed 10,000 Polish troops.

(Great Britain and the United States have been busy attempting to heal the breach between the two members of the United Nations. Premier Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski of the Polish government in exile had said in a speech Monday that a guiding principle of Polish diplomacy continued to be friendly relations with Russia.

Stalin's declaration was con-

CHAPTER I

The ground was cold and spongy from the rains. Loveday hooked her sturdy boots on the lower rung of the old three-bar fence, crossed her arms on the top bar, and put her head down on them. She felt the January sun, flooding down from the west, warm on her back and purred like a drowsy cat.

The tall man who was with her had no need to lift his feet from the chilly earth, for they were shod in the high-lace boots into which his trousers were tucked. The remainder of his visible costume consisted only of a leather coat snugly buttoned up to the roll collar about his neck. His thick fair hair was bare.

"That," said Loveday, looking up at him sidewise through a lock of her loosened hair without raising her head, "was a scramble!"

"It was grand," the man added, still breathing a little hard.

"But aren't the woods wonderful this time of year when everything's soaked and everything smells so divine?" she demanded.

"You're wonderful," Larry Ingersoll answered simply; "I never saw a girl climb like that."

"Oh, I'm used to it. After all, I was born here and my grandfather used to drag me on walks when I was so little that I had to be carried over the streams."

"I thought your grandfather was dead."

"He is, and my father too. But this was years ago. My father farmed this place; he never wanted to go off it," Loveday said. "My grandfather was Dr. Owen Hugh Gurney."

She said the name impressively. She had raised her head with its untidy soft hair lumped at the nape of her neck and was looking at her companion seriously with her round gray eyes. The hair was a pale indeterminate brown with a patina of gold over its straight soft thickness.

"Ought I know that name?" Larry asked.

"You would if you came from around here. But then," she conceded kindly, "you don't come from around here. Everyone adored him. He died six years ago when I was thirteen."

"You're only nineteen?" Larry asked. "You seem so much older. I've got a sister your age and she seems nothing but a kid."

"I've been mostly with older people," the girl said, thinking it out.

"Never been anywhere but here?"

"Oh yes. Two years in Canada in a convent school."

"Did you like it?"

"Loved it. But I've been here since I was about seventeen. I took an English course at the Union high here in Indian Hill."

"You've quite a place, and stock too," the young man said respectfully, looking at a trio of young horses who came galloping across a neighboring corral with great flinging of clods of mud.

"We did have, but those aren't our colts. All this is rented to a Portuguese now. We get all the milk and eggs we want from Joe Bettancourt, but that's all," Loveday said. "You see, there isn't a man in the family to run the place."

"That's right. But you've a mother?"

"We don't know very much about each other, do we?" the girl said with a little laugh. "But then after all, this is only the fourth time we've met."

"Fifth," he said briefly, with a swift glance that was as swiftly removed. The word had no more significance than a hundred others he had said, but somehow it and his manner thrilled her and she knew she would remember and treasure this particular moment.

"Oh yes, if you count that night at the dance."

"I do count that night at the high-school dance. You were Cinderella. You vanished at ten o'clock."

"Joe and Maria—that's the Bettancourts who rent the farm—were to bring me home, and they wouldn't stay any longer," she explained.

"I had the heck of a time finding out who you were, and then I was afraid to telephone. It took me two days to get up my nerve," he said aggrievedly.

"I don't know why everyone downtown talks as if Mother and Granny were ogres," Loveday said, laughing again. "They're not. The only reason I don't ask you up to the house is that they'd make you so uncomfortable. Granny sits in her room upstairs from nine in the morning until nine at night, and Mother is usually with her. They talk about old times until I feel as if I were in my fifties or my eighties too. If I wanted to use either parlor I'd have to begin warming it up three days in advance. The dining room is the warmest room in the house, but Mother keeps flats of young plants in there. My grandmother is a little deaf, and she'd ask hundreds of questions about you. 'Who'd thee say? Does thee know anything about him, child? Is thee related to the Dawson Ingersolls, young man?"

"Quakers?"

"Didn't thee know that?"

"But listen, you don't talk like that all the time?"

"I do when I'm talking to Grandmother Gurney. She doesn't like anything but the plain speech."

Larry was looking at her thoughtfully, his manner absent. Loveday felt the blood coming up in her face.

"You're the strangest, most fascinating girl I ever saw," he said. And that was something to treasure and remember too!

"What's your religion, Larry?"

"None."

"None! But that's not possible. Thee isn't an infidel!" But she was laughing. She was a great girl for laughter, he thought, and when she laughed she showed big white teeth in a wholly charming manner.

"No, I believe in God. But we never went to church or Sunday school." Larry jerked his head backward toward the house. "Don't you get lonely?" he asked, began and paused. Grandmother

"I walk downtown nearly every day and market. Mrs. Bettancourt or the mailman or somebody brings me home. Then I help Mother in the garden, and Thursdays and Sundays, when Wing Foo and Annie Lum go away, I cook. We used to have a woman named Delia-Delia Dillon, isn't that a pretty name?—to do the upstairs rooms. But she left after Grandfather died, so Mother and I do it all now. And I read-and-write poetry—" She finished with a little half-ashamed laugh.

"I'll bet you write good poetry," he said.

"You're the one who ought to be lonely," she accused him suddenly. "Away from your family and your friends in a little place like Indian Hill."

"They're not so far. Bakersfield," he said. "I can get there in two hours and a half."

"Oh, I thought you came from the East!" Loveday laughed. She was always ready to show those big white teeth. "How little we know about each other!" she said again.

"We know enough," the boy answered, suddenly sober. And again her pulses thrilled a little. "No; I went to Princeton, and afterward around the world. But my folks have always lived in Bakersfield," he said.

"Around the world!" There was longing in her voice as she looked at her own little strip of the wet, wooded world that lay below them. "China — India —" she mused. "Did you go alone?"

"No, on a cruise. I played the piano in a four-piece orchestra," he explained.

"D'you play the piano?"

"Enough for that. I never had a lesson. You say we don't know much about each other, but I think we know enough to know that we—we like each other, don't we?"

He moved closer along the fence and put his arms about her. Loveday was outwardly motionless, but her thoughts and emotions raced and tumbled in a mad confusion. A boy — a tall, nice, likable boy had his arm tight about her. She felt his breast hard and strong against her own; his mouth was close to her cheek.

"We know we like each other, don't we?" he said again. She managed to raise her lashes, and their eyes met. She caught her breath childishly.

"Well, of course," she managed to say. And then he was kissing her.

When, after a long moment, they drew apart and the familiar scene stopped swaying and revolving before Loveday's dazzled eyes, the sun had dropped behind the western hills. The factory whistles from Indian Hill sounded five o'clock.

"I've got to go in." Loveday said. But she said it without conviction, her folded arms on the top rail of the fence, her bright head laid on them, and her face turned sidewise toward Larry with a sleepy smile. She was a tall, slender girl, with something about her broad shoulders, her squared chin with its deep cleft, and her wide mouth that made her beauty a little unusual. Today she was dressed carelessly enough in old blue cotton slacks, well-worn laced brown shoes, and a thick roll-top white sweater.

"I must go in," she repeated.

"No, you mustn't," Larry said jealously.

"I must. We have dinner at six, and I have to have a bath."

But still she made no move to go, and presently he had his arms about her again, and again they kissed each other. And this time Loveday did not feel afraid.

Then she broke away and raced up the narrow back stairway, peeping in upon Annie Lum and Wing Foo as she passed the kitchen and emerging, at the top of the flight, upon an upper hallway across which the light in a big south bedroom was plying in a warm, rosy slant.

This was her grandmother's room, and her grandmother was in it now, talking with her mother. The older woman established in a winged back chair beside a coal fire, wore the Friend's garb infinitely becoming to her placid face that was broad with a cleft chin, like Loveday's.

"Thee looks like a gypsy," she observed in mild disapproval.

"You're late, Loveday," her mother said. Mrs. Gurney was unlike her Quaker mother-in-law; she was small and wiry with no gray in her thick, plainly dressed hair and despite her more than sixty years with something young—almost childish—in the abrupt quickness of her manner. Life had dealt Martha Gurney heavy blows, but Loveday never thought of her as being abandoned to grief or changed by grief. Mother had always been like this, rather silent and always busy, interested in flowers and cats and birds and all small animals rather than in people, sleeping soundly, eating with relish, loving books, contented. Her husband's mother had lived with her all through her married life and for the ten years of her widowhood.

"We walked up to the Widney place," Loveday explained, still breathing happiness and excitement and of the cold sweet out-of-doors. "It's heavenly in the woods! One little Japanese quince, up at the top of the orchard, all in bloom, and Widney's acacias out."

"Who's 'we'?" Mrs. Gurney asked. Loveday flushed and laughed.

"Lawrence Ingersoll. The boy I told you about. The boy I met at the school dance the night I went with the Bettancourts last week."

"I thought you saw him yesterday to, Loveday."

"I did. But only for a moment downtown. Today I was just starting to walk when he drove up the road and said he had to go up to Widney's to see about putting a pole line through their place. So he parked the car and we walked."

"Thee likes this young man, Loveday?" asked her grandmother.

"Larry Ingersoll?" color flooded Loveday's face and she laughed. "He's terribly—" she did not like extremes in speech. "He's really nice," Loveday amended it. "We like each other."

"What does thee know of him?"

"His people live in Bakersfield, and he went to Princeton, and he's working for the Gas and Electric people."

"Mother?"

"Mother and father and three sisters, I think. He seems very fond of them all." Loveday added the last phrase to fill a silence.

"How old would thee say he might me?"

"Twenty-seven next week. We have the same birthday. We found that out at the dance. But he seems younger—sort of boyish and—and sleepy and young—and laughing about everything."

The room was old-fashioned and cluttered with the flotsam and jetsam of a long life.

But it was a comfortable room, rich with memories of gracious living, steeped in an atmosphere of faith and peace and deep affection. The clean scent of freesia lilies were floating through the other scents tonight, mingling with the smell of woolens and books and of the fire that flickered stubbornly behind the polished steel rods of the grate.

"Has he kissed thee?" old Betsy Gurney asked quietly after a silence. Loveday looked over her shoulder with a startled laugh.

"What — what made you ask that, Grandmother?"

"Thee looked as if he might have." The old voice was untroubled and unreproachful.

"Yes. He did. Today," Loveday admitted, busy with the coals again, the tips of her ears red.

"Don't promise thyself to him unless thee means it," said her grandmother.

"Promise myself to him!" Loveday echoed, scared, happy, taken by surprise.

"He'll ask thee to, Loveday," the old woman said, "I want thee to make me a promise. Be a woman of the world, Loveday. If thee loves this man, then bind thyself to him with ropes of steel. Through good, through bad, bearing his children, keeping his house. If thee does that, thee'll work thy way out to happiness in the end. If thee engages thyself to marry him, keep thy word. It's a troubled world today," the serene old voice went on, "because we have not kept our covenant with the Lord. Men have broken their promise to Him, and so He keeps no promise to them. But let it be different with thee. In little things, in big things, keep thy word. Pay thy bills—"

"If I made a promise I would always keep it," she said.

"Not many do. Not many do," her grandmother murmured, half to herself.

DON'T WORRY ABOUT JOHNNY, HE'S ALL RIGHT

Even In China, He's Probably Still Thinking of Home and 'the Folks.'

By JOHN W. JARRELL

CHUNGKING —(INS)— An open letter to the mothers, wives and sweethearts of American soldiers serving in the Chinese war theater So you would like to know what Johnny does way out here, half way around the world from his home town in this ancient and mysterious land?

Well, Johnny—and all the other Johnnies stationed in this outpost—has exercised typical American ingenuity to make himself at home. China hasn't changed him a bit. His chief interests still are his loved ones at home, American food, American movies and what the Brooklyn Dodgers will do this year.

Johnny looks forward to the several nights a week that movies are shown at his billet Sometimes there aren't enough chairs to go around and he either stands up or he spreads his field jacket on the floor and watches Dorothy Lamour and Bob Hope entertain him from the silver screen—only the silver screen is the white-washed wall of the mess hall in most cases.

Johnny got a great kick a few nights ago when a short was shown detailing the sacrifices Hollywood stars are making for the war effort It was all good natured—but Johnny can't see how people driving in new, many cylindered automobiles and eating melt-in-your-mouth food are having such a tough time Johnny, though, appreciates the movies that Hollywood sends him for his entertainment — show nights are the big events of the week

Mail day is another big event. The days when Johnny doesn't get any mail are tough ones—but fortunately the folks at home keep him well supplied with letters which he reads and rereads until he knows them by heart.

Then there are basketball and volleyball and baseball leagues which give Johnny a lot of exercise and some relaxation Relaxation is pretty important out here because the Japs aren't far away and Johnny never knows when they will be over trying to drop bombs on him

The rest of Johnny's leisure hours are given over to sleeping and reading and engaging in the ever-going bull sessions that are a part of every American army camp, whether at Camp Robinson, Arkansas, or within sight of the Himalaya Mountains in China

If he wants Johnny can attend Chinese classes, too, and learn the difficult language Many of the boys are enterprisingly studying Chinese and some of them are wonderfully adept. Others have learned to say "din hao" very good and let it go at that

By now Johnny has probably learned to use chopsticks easily Every now and then he and some of his buddies go into town for a Chinese feed Fried snails and sweet and sour pork and bamboo shoots are a far cry from such American dishes as ham and hot roast beef, sandwiches and home-made apple pie

Yes sir, it is a strange land that Johnny is living in—but don't worry about him Johnny is doing all right, thanks

Japs Claim This Is British Carrier Sinking

Smuggled out of Japan after its publication in a Tokyo newspaper, this photo purports to show the sinking of the British aircraft carrier H. M. S. Hermes in the Indian ocean on April 9, 1942. The big flattop is about to settle under the surface. This is a Newsweek photo.

YOU'LL SOON USE ZONE NUMBERS IN ADDRESSING MAIL TO CITIES

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Don't be surprised if Cousin John has a slightly revised address the next time you hear from him. The postoffice department soon will institute a system of using zone numbers, in addition to street addresses, in the 178 largest cities.

The postoffice department announced today that it was experiencing such a fast turnover in personnel that it was forced to adopt this system to avoid delays in deliveries.

The department's change simply requires adding a numeral after the name of the city to indicate the postal delivery district in which the person resides. For example, if Cousin John lives in Boston, the proper way to address him will be "Boston, 8, Mass.", "Boston, 4, Mass." or whatever numeral he tells you to use, after the local postoffice tells him. The street address, of course, must also be given.

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker said the plan would assure quick and accurate delivery of the record-breaking volume of mail now being posted. By dividing each city into a number of zones, Walker believes inexperienced postal clerks will have less difficulty in separating mail destined for different sections of a city.

Ohio cities designated to use the new zone numbers are: Cincinnati, Dayton, Toledo, Columbus, Akron, Canton, Springfield, and Youngstown.

Pullman Company Improves Methods Of Making Shells

CHICAGO —(INS)— Improvements in the manufacture of shells for the Allies by the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company have resulted in the saving of more than 15,000 tons of steel, Wallace N. Barker, vice president of the company, announced. Barker said:

"At the time we started making shells, forgings were averaging about 155 pounds each. We have constantly reduced this weight until now our forgings average about 126 pounds and we are working toward even further weight reductions."

Constant efforts by the company to refine the methods of armor-piercing shell forgings and drawing them to size have resulted in savings amounting to 40 pounds per shell, the company executive said.

Reviewing some of the company activities in bringing about improvements in shell making, Barker explained that early in 1940 company men, skilled in forging car parts, studied known shell making techniques, adopting a British-Canadian roller draw bench for piercing and drawing forgings and introduced it to the United States.

THEATERS

Historic Picture.

The life story of William Pitt is the background for 20th Century-Fox's picture, "The Young Mr. Pitt," now showing at the Ohio. Robert Donat is seen in the title role. Main part of the picture starts when Pitt is made prime minister of England. At the time, England is a third-rate power. Pitt, however, meets the crisis and under his leadership England becomes a power. Then comes news of the French Revolution. In 1793 France declares war on Britain. The years of endless war roll by, and the people demand a truce. Pitt stands firm, however, for he sees the real menace of the rise of Napoleon Bonaparte and his lust for power. His fear becomes a reality when Napoleon declares war on England.

Comedy Drama.

Stuart Erwin co-stars with Evelyn Venable in "He Hired the Boss," now showing at the Madison. Erwin plays the part of a bookkeeper for Mr. Bates (Thurston Hall) by day and an air raid warden by night. Erwin wants to marry Emily Conway, (Miss Venable), but he can't see how his salary will cover the expenses. Later, fortune smiles on Erwin. Four lots he has purchased turn out to be worth $100,000, and Erwin buys the company. Co-attraction at the Madison is "Murder in Times Square."

Impersonation.

A Nazi agent, Baron von Regenstein, and an Englishman, Sir Edward Dominey, meet in an obscure native village in Africa. They two are almost identical in appearance. The Nazi agent plans to kill Sir Dominey and go to England and pass himself off as the dead man to gain the secrets of the home defense. Ralph Bellamy does a dual role, playing both the Baron and Sir Edward. "Two Fisted Justice," starring the "Range Busters" is the second attraction.

"Dracula" Himself.

Bela Lugosi will always be associated in the minds of American theatergoers with the role of the sinister Count Dracula, since he starred in the title role of "Dracula" for two years on the stage and in the screen version of the play several years later. Lugosi comes to the screen again in "The Ape Man," now playing at the Ritz. The story finds Lugosi partially in the form of an ape, and committing murder in an attempt to secure the spinal fluid which will restore him to human form. Ken Maynard is featured with Hoot Gibson in "Wild Horse Stampede," co-attraction.

MacArthur Calls Corregidor Holy Grail of America's War

(By United Press)

GEN. MARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia—Corregidor, the rocky fortress that held the last bitter dregs of death and defeat for the Americans in the Philippines, was posed today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur as the Holy Grail of America's war.

In a statement marking the first anniversary of the rock's fall to hordes of Japanese, MacArthur said:—

"Until we lift our flag from its dust, we stand unredeemed before mankind."

"Until we claim again the ghastly remnants of its last gaunt garrison, we can but stand as humble supplicants before Almighty God.

"There lies our Holy Grail."

MacArthur's statement was brief and held in it echoes of his promise to lead a conquering army back to the Philippines.

"Corregidor surrendered a full year ago today," he said. "Intrinsically it is but a barren war-worn rock hollowed as so many other places by death and disaster. Yet it symbolizes within itself that priceless, deathless thing—the honor of the nation."

Speaking with that same bitterness and earnestness — touched with a hopefulness typical of the hero of the Philippines—MacArthur had prayed on April 9, the anniversary of the fall of Bataan, that redemption would not be delayed too long.

MacArthur's phrase — "last gaunt garrison"—was the same he used to describe the soldiers who fought heroically but futily trying to hold Bataan, the army of which he said "no army has even done so much with so little."

The statement came after continued pleas from MacArthur and other leaders in the Southwest Pacific for more men, equipment and planes to prevent the Japanese from getting set in their newly-won empire and starting a new offensive.

On May 6, 1942, the few hungry, worn and wounded defenders of the Philippines were forced to surrender the fortress of Corregidor at the entrance to Manila bay after days of hammering by guns and planes.

Its fall ended organized resistance. Within its hollowed out caves, men had hung on waiting for help that never came. Almost two months before, MacArthur, his family and the key men of his staff had been flown to Australia to protect that continent from Japanese swarming southward in what then appeared to be unstoppable waves.

Upon his arrival in Australia under orders from President Roosevelt, MacArthur made the promise:

"I came through and I shall return . . . I shall keep the soldier's faith."

Firemen from Central station put out the blaze which threatened to spread to other parts of the truck, Fire Chief C. J. Seeberger said.

Tires Damaged—Miss Gladys McDonald, teacher in Madison high school, told police yesterday that nails had been driven into two of the tires on her car while it was parked on Fourth street and Rowland avenue. She said the tires were damaged Monday and Tuesday nights after 10 p. m.

Not a Run-Away—Acting on the report of a motorist who said he saw a run-away boy yesterday at South Main street and Lexington avenue, city detectives picked up the youth and turned him over to county juvenile officers who found the boy, 13, was hitchiking to his home in South Zanesville after visiting relatives in Norwalk.

Dog Attacks Boy—Jerry Beabout, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Beabout, Fairfax avenue, was bitten on the right leg by a dog last night while the boy played near his home, his mother told police. Officers found the animal had been treated against rabies.

Gets $10 Fine—Louis W. Hamaker, 31, of 500 Parkview street, was fined $10 and costs yesterday by Municipal Judge H. H. Schettler after Hamaker pleaded guilty to a charge of driving on the wrong side of the street. Hamaker's car had figured in an accident on West Sixth street early yesterday.

BULGARS REVOLT AT FIGHT ORDER

Refuse To Fight Against Force of Yugoslav Guerrillas.

JERUSALEM —(AP)— Several Bulgarian army units recently revolted against an order sending them to Yugoslavia to fight against Gen. Draja Milhailovic's guerrilla forces, a reliable source said today. It finally was necessary to cancel the order, said the informant, who could not be identified by name.

Another informant declared that anti-German feeling was mounting in Bulgaria and that 80 per cent of the army and the population were hostile to the Nazis.

LIBRARY HAS NEW STORY ON BURMA BATTLE

War Correspondent Tells of Experience From Start To End of Fighting.

RETREAT WITH STILWELL by Jack Belden, one of the new books in the Mansfield Public Library, is the story of a man who lived through the battle for Burma from its grim beginnings to its spectacular end. Written by a Far Eastern correspondent, it is as exciting as any adventure story and yet is a shrewd and penetrating explanation of the reasons why this fragment of empire was lost and an imperial army destroyed. This book with other non-fiction and fiction will be placed on the shelves of the library Saturday.

Gustav Eckstein, author of IN PEACE JAPAN BREEDS WAR, arrived in Japan for the first time on July 1, 1924, the day the American Exclusion Act went into effect. Since then he has revisited the country often and in this book he skillfully lays open the Japanese mind and psychology and, in exposing the complexities, the contradictions, the strength and weaknesses that make up the inscrutable character of our enemy, he has written a study that is essential reading for the understanding of the Japanese.

LIFE IN A PUTTY KNIFE FACTORY by H. Allen Smith contains further adventures in madness by the author of "Low Man on a Totem Pole." This book begins approximately where the other left off, and takes you further along Mr. Smith's unpredictable route—through a universe inhabited by the countless strange and eccentrac people whom Mr. Smith has encountered in the course of his career as journalist, columnist, author, and radio master of ceremonies.

YOUNG MAN OF THE WORLD by T. R. Ybarra follows "Young Man of Caracas" and takes up his college days at Harvard, his experiences as a cub reporter with the New York "Times" and "Collier's", his life as a foreign correspondent in fifteen European countries and in South America.

Other non-fiction includes LOVE AGAINST HATE. Menninger; QUALITATIVE CHEMICAL ANALYSIS, Prescott & Johnson; METHODS OF MEASUREMENT, Cornetet; HOW TO READ BLUEPRINTS. Lammey; RESISTANCE WELDING MANUAL; THE WAYS OF FASHION. Crawford; STORM OVER THE LAND; A PROFILE OF THE CIVIL WAR, Sandburg; THIS GREEN WORLD. Platt; HE'S IN THE ARMORED FORCE NOW. McGhee; ENGINE LATHE OPERATIONS, Whipple & Baudek.

CITIZEN TOM PAINE by Howard Fast is a portrait of one of the greatest of the founders of the Republic. Paine's life was as heroic as his vision of a better world. Born in poverty in England, he was helped to America by Franklin and became an editor in Philadelphia. With the news of the Battle of Lexington came the crystalization of ideas that had formed as he had watched and worked in the embryonic democracy of the new world. Paine wrote "Common Sense." It swept the colonies and finally left its imprint on the shape and on the very words of the Constitution.

EXPERIMENT PERILOUS by Margaret Carpenter is an exciting and intelligent psychological murder novel. Though elderly Miss Bedereux, New York bound, talked gayly about her visit to her brother's house, Dr. Bailey felt there was a hidden terror in her story. When he read of her death the next day, he knew that he must visit her brother's house. What he found at first was a normal household. What he found in the end was entirely unexpected.

FAKED PASSPORTS by Dennis Wheatley is a tale of romance and adventure which follows the career of the Imposter, Gregory Sallust, on another great mission in which he encounters both Goering and Voroshilov. The scene ranges from a hut in Brandenburg to a palace outside Berlin; to Helsinki; to Finland; to the Far North; to Leningrad and the Mannerheim line. Another book by the same author is "V for Vengeance."

Other fiction includes NOVEMBER STORM. McCormick; STAIRS OF SAND. Grey; DEATH AT DAKAR. O'Neil.

'JITTERBUG PANTS' RILE HIM

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—(U.P.)—David D. Coburn, 34, Negro butcher, gave as his excuse for opening a billiard ball barrage in a poolroom against spectators that "the boys in the jitterbug pants were trying to get me." To the court's inquiry, he explained that 'jitterbug pants' are big at the top and little at the bottom.

50-50 CHANCE

BERKELEY, Cal.—(U.P.)—The children being born during the turmoil of the present war period will have a 50-50 chance of happiness, according to Dr. David D. Eitzen, professor of pastoral service, of the Graduate School of Religion of the University of California.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

MILLION MORE PHONES IN USE

Bell System Reports That It Now Has 20,000,000 Subscribers.

(By International News Service)

BOSTON—Despite shortage of materials, the number of telephones in use in the United States increased by 1,100,000 last year.

Total phones in service exceed 20,000,000 according to the Bell Telephone system.

Reflecting measures taken to conserve facilities, the number of individual line residence phones showed a substantial decrease in 1942, while the proportion of party line residence stations increased.

Business main and extension phones — facilities generally used by small business firms—also declined, while business PBX telephones, serving larger users, increased in number. These trends were seen as effects of the war, with many small firms in non-essential activities going out of business and others engaged in war work expanding rapidly.

The average daily number of telephone conversations in 1942 was estimated at almost 87,000,000, a record high and about 2,700,000 more a day than in 1941.

Indicative of the increase in telephone use was the fact that today when about two-thirds of the telephones in the country are dial operated, as many operators are at work as there were in 1929.

Miles of telephone line in use in the United States have increased from the less than 20 million during the first World war to nearly 100 million today.

By October of last year nearly 17 billion feet of wire had been placed to serve about 2,500 military establishments and other war projects in the country.

The transcontinental cable, connecting at Omaha, Neb., and Sacramento, Calif., with the eastern and Pacific coast cable networks was placed in service by the end of the year, making possible for the first time coast to coast telephone communication over all cable facilities.

Despite war restrictions and discontinuance of service to enemy points, overseas radio telephone traffic for the first nine months of 1942 was more than a third higher than for the same period in 1941. Calls to Hawaii and Panama more than doubled.

YANKS BEGIN BIG PUSH ON BIZERTE BASE

Infantry Crumbling Defenses as British Rip Tebourba With 400-Gun Barrage.

ward Massicault and thence northward toward Tunis.

The British at one point were less than 20 miles from Tunis but there were still several German-held hills dominating their entry to the Tunis plain.

A dispatch from a correspondent with the British First army, said that the Germans apparently did not intend to make a long stand at Bizerte and seemed to be concentrating in the Tunis area. (In Washington OWI Director Elmer Davis said that the Allies might invade Europe after the capture of Bizerte without awaiting a cleanup at Tunis or on Cape Bon.)

A United Press dispatch from an advance Allied air base said reconnaissance planes reported Allied artillery bombarding the Bizerte harbor area while bombers joined in the assault. Docks, wharves and shipyards were afire, the dispatch said.

Flying Fortresses also set widespread fires in the harbor area of Tunis and nearby La Goulette, the dispatch said.

Franco-American troops captured 300 prisoners in their fighting advances toward Bizerte from the west and southwest, while the British First army seized 30 more in its successful assault on Djebel Bou Aoukaz.

American ground troops in the northern sector were mopping up after their advances in the Mateur sector. Most prisoners seized yesterday were Italians, again indicating the Germans were leaving Italians as rearguard troops while they retired to new positions.

On the roads east and southeast of Mateur, the Americans had advanced about four miles.

Today's communique said a formation of nine Axis airplanes was shot down off the Tunisia coast. The nine included six air transports, at least two of which carried troops.

The capture of Djebel Bou Aoukaz, 11 miles northeast of Medjez-El-Bab, climaxed a week-long see-saw battle and brought the British to within six miles of Tebourba and 21 miles of Tunis, the capital. Farther south, other First army troops already hold positions less than 20 miles west of Tunis.

American troops operating on the British left flank also had driven to within six miles of Tebourba from the west.

The main portion of the Second U. S. corps farther north pressed its drive on Bizerte, beating off several counter-attacks and captured "part of an important feature" in fierce fighting south of Lake Achkel, the communique said.

Front reports said the American column operating south of Lake Achkel had reached Djebel Achkel and was within five miles of Ferryville. Axis base between Lakes Achkel and Bizerte and 10 miles south of Bizerte itself.

A French column moving along the coast, meantime, pushed on to the rim of the plains stretching northwest to Bizerte, about nine miles away.

French troops thrusting westward southeast of Pont Du Fahs neared 4,000-foot Djebel Zaghouan, highest peak in Tunisia dominating the whole area westward to the sea, while the British Eighth army pounded forward in a local advance above Enfidaville, 50 miles south of Tunis.

Flying Fortresses sank a large merchant vessel in the Sicilian straits and medium bombers sank another and scored hits on three others.

Four Allied planes were missing from all operations.

Sees Early Blow At Europe Likely

WASHINGTON — (UP) — War Information Director Elmer Davis today said it was possible the allied armies might launch their invasion of the European continent without waiting for the end of the Battle of Tunisia.

"It would appear to be feasible to start the invasion of Europe even if there was one pocket in Tunisia that hadn't been cleaned out," Davis said in an interview.

He said it was entirely possible that the attack against the continent would be made as soon as the enemy was pocketed off at Bizerte, which from today's news should be accomplished "pretty soon."

Nazis Describe New Ack-Ack Towers

(By Associated Press)

The Berlin radio gave the German people today a description of Berlin's new anti-aircraft artillery towers.

In a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press, a trans-ocean military correspondent was quoted as calling the towers "gigantic" an saying that each one contained as much ferro-concrete as 15 kilometers —about 10 miles—of the west wall.

"This scarcely believable amount," the broadcast said, "is explained by the immense thickness of the walls, and the strength of the foundation of the guns and of the ceiling of bombproof rooms."

The broadcast said that apart from housing a crew of some 200 men, shelter could be provided to "many civilians."

"There is even a room for childbirth," it added.

Victory Gardeners Get Chance to Win War Stamp Prizes

bles will be displayed the same day in the Martin Hardware store windows on North Main street where details of the contest will be posted.

As other vegetables develop later in the season, prizes will be awarded for the best and earliest displays of them, said Mrs. H. J. Paulsen, city garden committee chairman. In addition to radishes and peas, the classifications will include cabbage, sweet corn, tomatoes, carrots, beets, potatoes, cauliflower, cucumbers, wax beans, freen beans, egg plant, summer squash, and green peppers.

Other prizes will be offered for the tallest and biggest sunflower, tallest sweet corn stalk, biggest watermelon, pumpkin, and winter squash.

Gardeners will be asked to state when they planted the competing crop, whether they used fertilizer, and what gardening methods they employed to grow the vegetables.

LEWIS SNUBS NEW MEETING

Absent as WLB Reconvenes In Effort To Reach Coal Dispute Settlement.

truce. In event the coal strike is resumed, Nelson probably would agree to a dimout if Ickes holds it to be essential.

Another likely action in event of a resumption of the strike is a ban on all non-essential transportation. Ickes requested Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman to do that before the truce, but he, too, awaits the end of the truce.

The coal seizure order, regulation No. 1 of the solid fuels administration, enables Ickes to divert or obtain coal from any source he deems feasible for the relief of users with inadequate and dangerously low supplies. It is designed chiefly for use when the coal market is tight in the fall and winter.

The war labor board suspended hearings when the board referred the strike to President Roosevelt last week. It was named originally to consider only the bituminous dispute, but has been designated also to take up the anthracite dispute later.

The board announced that the panel will "go forward as expeditiously as possible consistent with obtaining a complete statement of the facts." That might take some time.

Labor board officials conceded that the nation probably will be faced with another coal strike crisis unless a negotiated settlement is made or the truce is extended by Lewis. They believe an extension the more probable.

It remains to be seen whether a settlement may be faciliated by government seizure of the mines and Ickes' six-day week order.

Associates of Lewis conceded privately that he could not expect to obtain the $2-a-day wage increase demand "even if Lewis himself were a member of the war labor board." President Roosevelt has applied his hold-the-line executive order directly to the mine dispute. But the six-day week, with time-and-a-half for the sixth day, plus strict government policing of living costs in the mining towns may yet assist some settlement satisfactory to Lewis.

The initiative for reopening direct negotiations broken off when the dispute was certified to the war labor board apparently must come either from Lewis or the operators. Ickes and the board directed they would not request further direct negotiations.

WLB Wants To Scrap Little Steel Formula

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The War Labor Board, admitting that President Roosevelt's hold-the-line order virtually stripped it of power, today appealed to the White House for authority to scrap its own "little steel formula" and establish wage controls on the basis of prevailing "going rates" of pay.

The appeal was made, it was learned, in a statement sent by the WLB to the White House offices of James F. Byrnes, economic stabilization director and so-called "assistant president of the home front."

The WLB, in its declaration, suggested that the new "going rate" be set by obtaining the most frequently paid wage scale in an industrial area and fixing it as the ceiling up to which all pay could be brought.

If the going rate was found to be 80 cents an hour, the board would be given authority to readjust all wages up to that level. If there was any conflict in figures over the going-rate of pay, the board, as a concession to the inflation-control program of the administration, would establish the lower figure as the ceiling.

Wife Asks Alimony of $300 Monthly From YMCA Resident.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Alimony of $300 monthly from Harry L. Brubb, a resident of the Zanesville Y. M. C. A., is asked in a divorce suit on file today in Franklin county common pleas court by Mrs. Betty M. Grubb, 67, of Columbus.

In her petition, Mrs. Grubb charged neglect and abandonment saying her husband left her in 1939. She listed his holdings as worth more than $75,000.

'R Street' Monroe Before House

John P. Monroe, above, master of the mystery house on Washington's R street, is pictured as he explained to house military affairs committee his mission in the national capital. Monroe described himself as a "manufacturer's representative." Probe of Monroe's activities began when it was revealed that many government bigwigs attended elaborate social functions in R street house.

Threatened CD Resignations Bring Quick Action by City

them to organize for duty in the event of an air raid. Zones have been set up for other areas of the city and Madison township.

Changing his mind about the expenditure of OCD funds, the mayor said today he had decided to put his approval on orers for equipment "until our money runs out." He said previously that estimates for equipment submitted to him had been too high and he would not approve them until they were reduced.

The $177 order he signed today was reduced from nearly $400 after Mayor Locke refused to sign the earlier one.

"If the majority of the civilian defense workers want to spend the money for equipment and take their chances on getting more from the state to keep the system functioning, it's all right with me," the mayor added.

Workers said they needed identification bands and stickers to enable them to drive their cars downtown in the event of a raid or black-out and to prevent them from being mistaken for prowlers when they called at homes to give air raid instructions during black-outs.

Mrs. Pierce said she was told yesterday by a state OCD representative that another allocation of state money will be made within two weeks, but the mayor said he knew nothing of a promise of financial help.

The order signed today by the mayor as OCD chairman included 800 arm bands, about 3,000 stickers for cars and helmets, 500 pieces of insignia for block leaders, 200 air raid warden post markers, and 1,000 certificates for block leaders who completed 50 hours of work in behalf of civilian defense.

FINISH PLANS FOR 'E' AWARD

times was affiliated with a Cleveland firm which frequently transacted business with the Hughes-Keenan company. He has often visited the plant here.

Lieut. A. E. Heiser, resident inspector of navy materiel in Mansfield, will present the "E" pins to A. E. Hesselden, president, and Albert Efird, chief steward, of Pioneer Lodge No. 1, Hughes-Keenan union

President Way of the company said he had asked that Dick Gourley, a Cleveland marine who served on Guadalcanal, be permitted to present "E" pins to each of the 182 employes of the firm. Young Gourley, discharged from service because of physical disability, is the son of Ray Gourley, Cleveland, business friend of Way.

The Senior high school band, which will provide a 15-minute concert before the ceremonies, will play "Anchors Aweigh" while the Army-Navy "E" flag is raised to the top of a flag pole beside the American flag in front of the Hughes-Keenan building.

The McVey post American Legion color guard and buglers will participate in the program. Common Pleas Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch will preside, introducing the guests and speakers. Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor of the First Lutheran church, will give the invocation and Msgr. R. C. Goebel, pastor of St. Peter's Catholic church, will offer the benediction.

Singing of one verse of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the audience will signal opening of the ceremonies, while group singing of "America" will close it.

Company officials said the army and navy had requested the ceremonies be brief and simple.

"We are very proud of this splendid achievement on the part of our employes," said President Way. "We have a mighty fine, clean and industrious group of men with whom we enjoy working in complete harmony."

Equally proud of the firm's accomplishment was W. E. Post, vice president and general manager, who added:

"Employes and officers of the Hughes-Keenan company are extremely pleased to be given the "E" award. We feel that everyone in the plant has contributed his best to winning the honor. We expect to continue to do everything we can to assist in bringing about an early victory."

In winning the government honor, the Mansfield plant was considered by an army-navy cognizant board for quality and quantity of production in the light of available facilities. Also taken into consideration by the board in making awards were these factors:

Full utilization of equipment, avoidance of stoppages, maintenance of fair labor standards, cooperation with the war program, effective management and engineering, record on accidents, health, sanitation, and plant protection, utilization of sub-contracting facilities, training of additional labor forces, and record of absenteeism.

broadcast by Berlin radio quoted Tojo:

"Japan's armed forces have fortified all the strategically important points of greater Asia and now are ready to deal an annihilating blow to the enemy. One thousand million people of greater East Asia are unanimously determined to prosecute the war to a victorious conclusion. On the other hand, Germany and Italy and our other allies are constantly increasing their cooperation with Japan in order to establish the new world order."

Yanks Blast Jap Shipping At Wewak

GEN. M'ARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia—(U.P.)—Allied Liberators, attacking through intercepting Zeros and a rain of anti-aircraft fire, touched off explosions and damaged three ships in a blasting raid on Wewak, on the New Guinea north coast, a communique said today.

All of the heavy bombers returned after driving off nine enemy fighters, one of which was damaged.

Several direct hits were scored on a 5,000-ton Japanese cargo vessel off Kairiru island and it was left ablaze and listing while the fliers believed two 500-ton ships had been damaged.

Attacking at dusk yesterday, the planes loosed heavy bombs on the town and along the waterfront that caused several large explosions and set fires. The raid was the first on Wewak in several days. The enemy base is 475 miles northwest of Allied-held Buna.

A flight of medium bombers attacked Toeal, in the Kai islands northwest of Australia, and kindled fires in the enemy barracks and wharf area, the communique said.

Soviet mid-day communique said. In one sector alone, some 400 German officers and men were killed and prisoners and booty were captured.

The initial Soviet break-through, announced in the Wednesday midnight communique, carried eight miles into the Axis defense belt and engulfed 11 cities and towns, including the heavily-fortified base of Krymskaya, 17 miles northeast of Novorossisk, and Neberdjaiskaya, 7½ miles to the southwest and only 10 miles from the naval base.

More than 7,000 Axis troops were killed and 80 guns, 220 machineguns and other booty were captured, the midnight communique said.

(The Germans acknowledged the evacuation of Krymskaya, insisting that it was "insignificant from a strategical viewpoint," and said the considerable shortening of the Axis line was bound to increase the strength of the German defense force.)

The Russian offensive, first such large-scale operation undertaken by the Red army since its successful winter offensive from Leningrad to the Caucasus, was aimed at wiping out the Axis bridgehead on the Taman peninsula, bounded on the west by the Sea of Azov, Kerchenski strait and the Black sea.

The Germans have been desperately reinforcing the bridgehead to retain a toehold on the Caucasus for an Axis offensive aimed at re-capturing the Maikop oil fields to the east.

Besides Krymskaya and Neberdjaiskaya, the Soviets re-captured Krasny, Chernomorsky, Zaporozhsky, Vesely, Sadovoi, Blagodarny, Melekhovsky, Nazhne Grechesky and Verkhne Adagum.

The attacking Russian forces were supported by massed artillery and a heavy cover of planes.

Nearly 2 Billion In U. S. Aid Goes To Reds

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R Stettinius, jr., disclosed today the United States had shipped $1,825,477,000 worth of goods to Russia by April 1.

An overwhelming majority of these shipments, totaling 3,500,000 long tons, reached Russia safely, Stettinius said, adding that losses were suffered principally on the North Russian route.

The shipments included more than a million tons of foodstuffs, "many tens of thousands" of trucks, jeeps, and other military vehicles, and several thousand planes.

Stettinius reported total lend-lease shipments to all countries since inception of the plan amounted to $7,104,731,000, aside from planes ferried by air and ships moving under their own power, which amounted to an additional $675,000,000.

LONDON—Premier Wladislaw Sikorski of the Polish exile government today welcomed a proposal from Premier Josef Stalin for a Polish-Russian pact directed against Germany and Allied quarters believed prospects were brightening for resumption of relations between the two governments.

Before leaving home he had written his wife a note stating that he was going away and that she would not see him again.

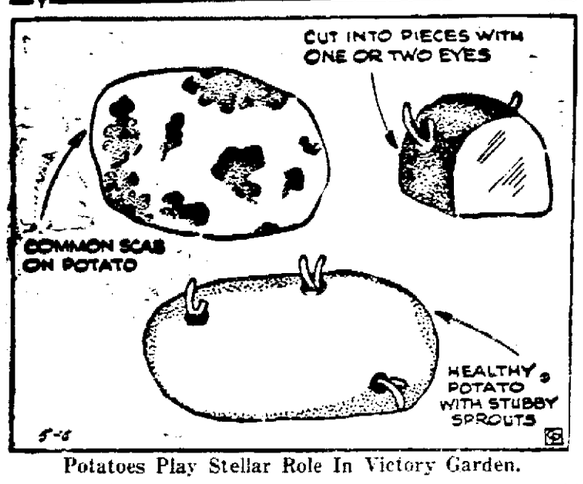
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Potatoes Play Stellar Role In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association.

HOMAGE IS being paid to the humble potato this year. And more potatoes will be grown in Victory vegetable gardens this season than ever before. Reasons for this are that home gardeners figure that potato prices may skyrocket by next fall, and, furthermore, potatoes can be grown on sod land that has been turned for the first time. In fact, if a Victory garden is being made on land turned for the first time, it will be found that potatoes will do better than almost any other vegetable.

Be careful, however, when selecting potatoes for seed purposes. Do not use potatoes afflicted with scab, an example of which is shown in the accompanying Garden Graph. The safest procedure is to buy certified seed potatoes, which have been treated for scab and are free of disease. The better the seed the better the crop.

Select well formed and fairly large seed potatoes, as illustrated. Such potatoes should have stubby sprouts, for this type when planted will grow more vigorously than sprouts which are overly long and apt to be soft.

Each piece of potato when cut for planting should have one or two "eyes," as illustrated, but not more than three. Each piece of potato should have as much flesh as possible around each eye, for the plant lives on this supply of food while sprouting. Take care not to break off the young sprouts when planting.

Seed potatoes should be cut into planting pieces about a week before planting them. This gives the cut surfaces time to heal over and form a callus.

REPAIR RUDDER OF FORTRESS DURING FLIGHT

Sergeants Become Heroes as They Save Huge Ship After Jap Attack.

By CHARLES P. ARNOT

American correspondent with the U. S. A. A. F. in the South Pacific.

(Distributed by the Associated Press)

WITH THE U. S. ARMY FORCE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, April 21—(Delayed)—This is the story of a damaged bomber and two air force sergeants whose inventive genius averted a possible crackup.

Lieut. John L. Jacobs, jr., of San Francisco, 25-year-old pilot of a Liberator bomber, described Sgts, Van C. Crain, 23, of Caldwell, Tex., and J. J. Bruey, 25, of Canton, O., as "heroes in my book" tonight after he set the big plane down at this advanced base in a perfect landing. Here's why:

The big bomb load from Jacobs' plane had just crashed into installations on Japanese-held Nauri Island, 750 miles northeast of Guadalcanal, when six Zeros swarmed about the formation.

"The first burst of machine-gun fire from those Zeros severed my rudder' connection cable, and the pedals went limp under my feet," he said. "There was nothing to do but fall out of the formation and take a chance on making it back alone."

Then began a 45-minute running battle during which Jacobs' gunners knocked down or damaged at least two Zeros. Gunfire from the enemy planes knocked out he Liberator's intercommunication and oxygen systems and set fire to a liferaft, but not a crewman was hurt.

Sgt. Charles Duren, 21, of Waterbury, Conn., the radio operator, had the narrowest escape.

"One of those bullets actually shot the throat microphone off my neck," he said.

The Liberator finally shook off the Zeros, but Jacobs still was faced with the problem of how to land when he reached this base without rudder control.

"I didn't have to worry long," he said. "A couple of the boys had an idea, so they went to work. When we circled for our landing the rudder cable was as good as new."

Crain and Bruey took wire used to arm bombs and expertly spliced the broken rudder cable—a tedious hour-and-half job. Jacobs said the patched-up cable enabled him to make the best landing of his flight career.

The story of Crain and Bruey brought this comment from Brig. Gen. Truman H. Landon, commander of bomber operations in the central Pacific.

"You can mark that down as another sample of American resourcefulness—the kind of resourcefulness that will win the war."

FATHER AND SON JOIN HANDS ACROSS SEA TO WHIP AXIS

(By International News Service)

PITTSBURGH — American and British unity — exemplified by father and son—is working on opposite shores of the Atlantic to pile up war goods to lick the Axis.

The son is James Whyte, 60-year-old pattern maker at the Westinghouse brass foundry, and the father, David Whyte, is a mere 95-year-old master mechanic at the John Brown & Co., shipyards, Clydebank, Scotland.

But the entire story can't be told by giving their ages and the work they are doing. The "younger" Whyte puts aside 33 per cent of his weekly earnings for war bonds. He said:

"It's a pleasure to buy them."

Father and son correspond regularly by air mail and James said that his Dad "is tickled pink about the fact that we both are pitching in to lick the Axis."

Recently, the son added, his father was wounded slightly when Axis planes staged a bombing raid on the area "but Dad is back at work again."

Sergeants Become Heroes as They Save Huge Ship After Jap Attack.

By CHARLES P. ARNOT

American correspondent with the U. S. A. A. F. in the South Pacific.

(Distributed by the Associated Press)

WITH THE U. S. ARMY FORCE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, April 21—(Delayed)—This is the story of a damaged bomber and two air force sergeants whose inventive genius averted a possible crackup.

Lieut. John L. Jacobs, jr., of San Francisco, 25-year-old pilot of a Liberator bomber, described Sgts, Van C. Crain, 23, of Caldwell, Tex., and J. J. Bruey, 25, of Canton, O., as "heroes in my book" tonight after he set the big plane down at this advanced base in a perfect landing. Here's why:

The big bomb load from Jacobs' plane had just crashed into installations on Japanese-held Nauri Island, 750 miles northeast of Guadalcanal, when six Zeros swarmed about the formation.

"The first burst of machine-gun fire from those Zeros severed my rudder' connection cable, and the pedals went limp under my feet," he said. "There was nothing to do but fall out of the formation and take a chance on making it back alone."

Then began a 45-minute running battle during which Jacobs' gunners knocked down or damaged at least two Zeros. Gunfire from the enemy planes knocked out he Liberator's intercommunication and oxygen systems and set fire to a liferaft, but not a crewman was hurt.

Sgt. Charles Duren, 21, of Waterbury, Conn., the radio operator, had the narrowest escape.

"One of those bullets actually shot the throat microphone off my neck," he said.

The Liberator finally shook off the Zeros, but Jacobs still was faced with the problem of how to land when he reached this base without rudder control.

"I didn't have to worry long," he said. "A couple of the boys had an idea, so they went to work. When we circled for our landing the rudder cable was as good as new."

Crain and Bruey took wire used to arm bombs and expertly spliced the broken rudder cable—a tedious hour-and-half job. Jacobs said the patched-up cable enabled him to make the best landing of his flight career.

The story of Crain and Bruey brought this comment from Brig. Gen. Truman H. Landon, commander of bomber operations in the central Pacific.

"You can mark that down as another sample of American resourcefulness—the kind of resourcefulness that will win the war."

FATHER AND SON JOIN HANDS ACROSS SEA TO WHIP AXIS

(By International News Service)

PITTSBURGH — American and British unity — exemplified by father and son—is working on opposite shores of the Atlantic to pile up war goods to lick the Axis.

The son is James Whyte, 60-year-old pattern maker at the Westinghouse brass foundry, and the father, David Whyte, is a mere 95-year-old master mechanic at the John Brown & Co., shipyards, Clydebank, Scotland.

But the entire story can't be told by giving their ages and the work they are doing. The "younger" Whyte puts aside 33 per cent of his weekly earnings for war bonds. He said:

"It's a pleasure to buy them."

Father and son correspond regularly by air mail and James said that his Dad "is tickled pink about the fact that we both are pitching in to lick the Axis."

Recently, the son added, his father was wounded slightly when Axis planes staged a bombing raid on the area "but Dad is back at work again."

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1943.

Sale of the new Willkie book continues unabated—without the lure of autographed copies.

New York is publicly described as "the best defended city on the east coast"—but thus far Hitler has made no announcement of his strongest or weakest areas.

Apparently overlooked in the tin can salvage drive is the need for can openers suited to the requirement of removing both the top and bottom of cans—careful search reveals none in Mansfield stores.

Army-Navy 'E' for Hughes-Keenan

AN ARMY-NAVY "E" AWARD, such as is to be made to the Hughes-Keenan company in Mansfield tomorrow, is an honor not easily won, as no more than two per cent of the 85,000 eligible industries in the United States have been adjudged deserving of this recognition of exceptional performance.

It is explained that high quality and quantity of production, based on available facilities, are considered, also full utilization of equipment; avoidance of work stoppages; maintenance of fair labor standards; co-operation with the war program; effective management and engineering; record on accidents, health, sanitation and plant protection; utilization of subcontracting facilities; training of additional labor forces, and record of absenteeism.

It is thus seen that many factors enter into bestowal of this recognition and that full co-operation of management and employes is essential to reaching and maintaining the high standards of excellence required to gain and hold this coveted award.

In a way, the industrial performance which leads up to such recognition exemplifies the whole national requirement for home front unity of effort in winning the war—each doing his or her part, to the best of ability, to produce materials and supplies necessary to carry the war to victory.

It is the United States of America, through designated representatives, that will tomorrow express appreciation to the Hughes-Keenan company (which means every associate and employe thereof), for the fine service that each has performed thus far in helping to win the war, and as an indication of confidence that this excellent record will continue.

The Hughes-Keenan company is the first of Mansfield's industries to be thus honored and tomorrow's impressive ceremonies may well serve as inspiration to others that may be nearing the mark of rigid requirements for similar recognition.

Hope To Extend Coal Mine 'Truce'

QUICK ACTION by Fuel Administrator Ickes in granting coal miners a six-day week, with time-and-a-half pay for the sixth day, effects an increase of $10.50 per week in the earning power of miners but still leaves unsettled the matters of their demands for higher wages and the "portal to portal" time allowance which has been a subject of much controversy.

While Ickes seems insistent that the War Labor Board shall not be by-passed as the final wage-determining agency, action thus far has evidenced no firm governmental policy as to wage limits and the 15-day "truce" which John L. Lewis impudently "granted" just in advance of President Roosevelt's Sunday night speech seems to leave the mine union's leader in as dictatorial position as before.

It is said in Washington that the government does not recognize this as a "truce," but as an ending of the strike threat resulting from the president's appeal to the miners to return to work, or continue at work, for their country.

Hope is expressed that the present truce can be extended for the duration of war, but Mr. Lewis has given no indication of willingness to do this and a 15-day respite from nation-wide stoppage of coal production presents far from a bright outlook.

Meanwhile the Axis propaganda machine has been busy, not without some justification, in pointing to the coal controversy as evidence of disunity in the United States and lack of support of the war effort.

It is probably difficult for Hitler, Tojo and Mussolini to properly evaluate a character like John L. Lewis injected into the national scene. Their ideas of what to do in such cases have been shown to be quite different from methods of procedure in this country.

It is difficult to explain, even to many people in the United States, why any man, or any minority, should be permitted sufficient freedom to jeopardize the nation's welfare in time of war.

In the Era of High Speed

THIS NATION, more than any other, has glorified in speed. First there was fast horse racing, then fast bicycling, fast trains, fast motor-cycling and fast flying. It has seemed that man was destined to live by speed without limit.

Latest triumph recorded is the transatlantic flight of a fully-loaded Liberator bomber from Newfoundland to Britain—2,200 statute miles—in six hours and 12 minutes, with Capt. G. R. Buxton as pilot. This cuts eight minutes from a record made last week.

It is a wonderful feat, with doubtless more flying wonders to follow. But somehow there isn't the thrill there used to be in such announcements. Man gets used to speed and takes it for granted. As he does so, rationality tends to resume control.

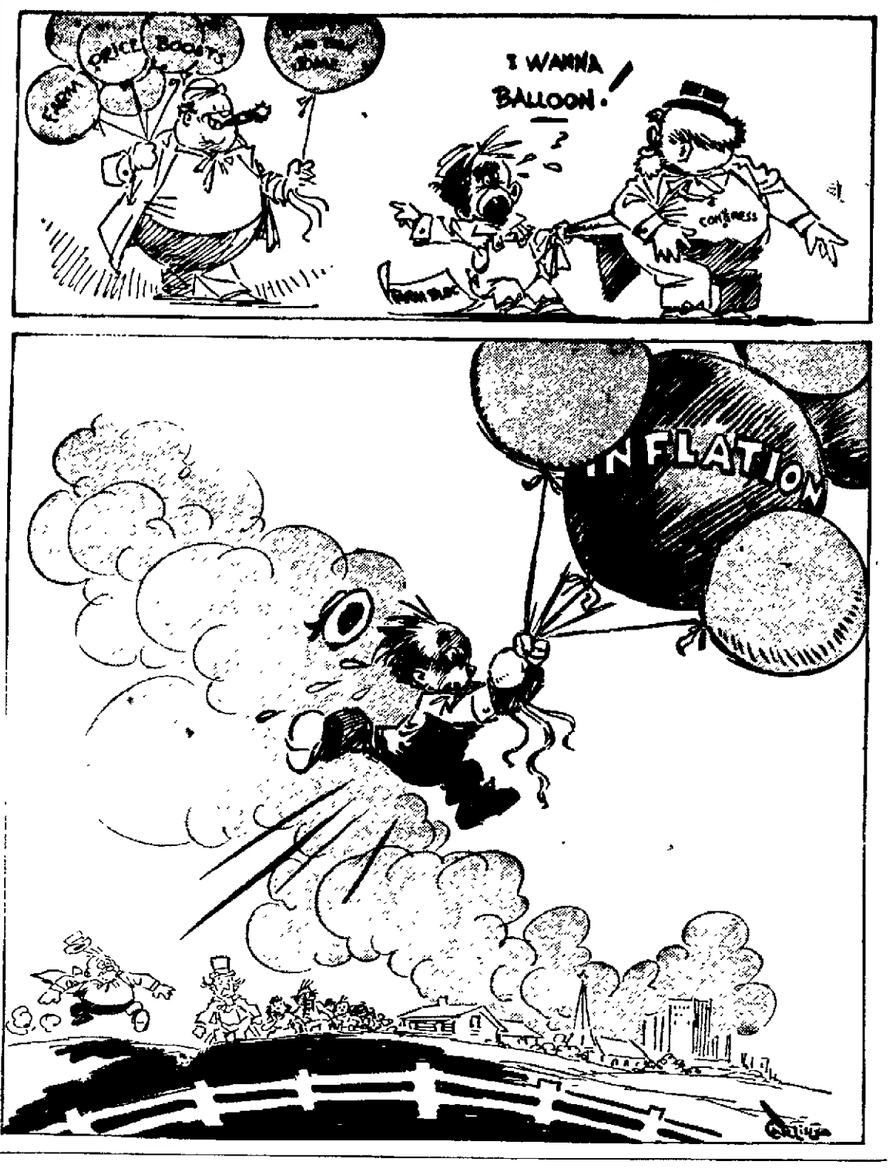
Speed, man learns, though useful on occasion, is not much in itself. Familiarity breeds contempt. It may also breed sanity. The time may not be for ahead when mature men will get quite a thrill out of staying quietly at home.

It's a Long Trip To Truk

TRUK is a name to remember. Located in the Caroline islands, it is the great Japanese naval base of the South Pacific. A thousand miles from Guadalcanal and 1,150 from Buna in New Guinea, it is too far for more than occasional American bombing. Yet a few well-placed bombs there would do more good than ten times their number almost anywhere else in the Pacific.

The track to Truk, if taken island by island, may be a long one. But taken it must be if the Japanese menace in the Pacific is to be done away with.

HE WON'T BE HAPPY WHEN HE GETS IT



Tax Collections to Slide In June

By CHARLES P. STEWART

JUNE income tax collections are not going to be as satisfactory as March's were, according to a very practical group of economists—the country's small loan men, or "sharks," as they are called by folk who dare to antagonize them.

For the information of the few earners whose stipends are too trifling to be hit by this tax, it should be pointed out that the levy is made on an annual basis, but that the victims may pay it quarterly if they choose. Whether or not they really did choose to split the agony up into four installments, a lot of them elected to do it that way this year. It is not hard to understand why they did so, either, considering the dent that a total payment, at the present juncture, is calculated to make in the average individual's bank account.

Well, Uncle Sam's collections were rather unexpectedly satisfactory at the middle of March.

The reason is explained by the small loan people. Most of the money was borrowed in little chunks of $100 or so, and now is being paid for at the approximate rate of 2 per cent monthly.

THE 2 PER CENT is not so bad, but a great majority of the borrowers probably had their savings pretty well cleaned out for principal deficiencies, and will have to borrow again from scratch in June. This will make the second quarter worse for them than the first, and the third and fourth will be still more painful. Meanwhile the "loan shark" will be correspondingly additionally cautious.

The sharks are worried about it already.

The infernal thing is cumulative.

"Pay-go" legislation won't lift the load. It comes too late.

March 15's collections, then, were fairly good. June's will be less so. The third will cause a distinct ache; the fourth a superache.

In the course of a generation doubtless we will have adapted ourselves, but not for quite a while. The popular theory is that the pinch will pass with the war's end. Practical economic betting is that it will continue indefinitely afterward. Governmental economists speak of it as a mere emergency. Loan sharks seem to think it will last for a couple of lifetimes.

THE government's dope is that, the war over, there will be such an accumulated demand for civilian supplies that industry will be forced to hump itself to meet requirements.

All authorities agree that requirements will be tremendous. But will civilian dom be able to pay for what it wants?

Supplying it won't do any good, if the public can't foot the bills.

Won't it be the same old thing as after the last war?

There was a demand then, but no market. Folk needed the stuff, but couldn't pay for it.

The supposition is that, in today's instance, preliminary fixing has been more skillful than during World War I. However, while World War I was in a class by itself and its aftermath couldn't be reckoned with, so is this a war by itself—incomparable with anything hithero.

It is cheerful to assume that now is the one time that we have insured against as to the future.

What stumps me is—

Why are scientific economists so confident in advance, whereas the loan boys are so skeptical?

Paying the Price

IT'S SO EASY, now, to look back and see how many mistakes we've made. But there isn't much profit in hindsight unless we do something helpful with our regrets. As Mary Margaret McBride does.

Yesterday I read something she did back in 1941, in her book "America For Me." We hadn't entered the war then. Most of us didn't think it could happen. Others knew that we were due to reap many an evil crop from our mistaken sowing. Mary was one of them.

Here was this dear land she loved so much, for which our fathers had paid such a heavy price. But how were we guarding that treasure now? What price were we exacting from the thousands of strangers who crossed our sill, seeking the chance denied them in the lands they'd left? Out of her passionate loyalty, Mary wondered.

"We've always been a mixed people and found strength through that mixture," said she. "And we should go on mixing, as long as there's the same room and reason, religious and political liberty, which our founding fathers knew.

"But while we're offering such boundless hospitality and opportunity, I think we should do some serious thinking. Give everything for nothing? Why couldn't we throw open some parts of our great land which need the service such new Americans can give, and make it plain that our overcrowded cities will soon lack luck and room unless there is a shift in population.

"Look for example at the sparsely settled wilderness that, for years, has needed doctors, engineers, craftsmen of every sort. Why shouldn't some of these new Americans serve their stint in these pioneer places as part of their naturalization?

"This is just a practical woman's way of planning things — putting her nation in order as she'd put her house. And some may criticize. But I think it's only fair to ask our newly naturalized citizens to accept a little part of the hardship, loneliness and sacrifice which our ancestors gladly made when they founded this country.

"I HAVE NO PREJUDICE AGAINST 'FURRINERS' NOR ANY PATIENCE WITH PEOPLE WHO EXPRESS SUCH PREJUDICES. BUT WE CAN MAKE OUR COUNTRY SEEM SO CHEAP THAT THE VERY PEOPLE WHO SEEK ITS 'RIGHTS' WILL SPEEDILY DESPISE THEM."

And despise them they did, Mary girl, with their Bundist camps, their Nazi spies and German saboteurs! One hears so many pleas and prayers and vows these days . . . such endless flights of oratory. But here's the stuff that really made and still can save America . . . THE PRICELESS STUFF OF ELBOW GREASE AND COMMON SENSE AND SWEAT!

One Man's Opinion

—By WALTER KIERNAN

THE CHAIRMAN of a draft board in New Jersey posted the names of every man who had been deferred by his board and the reason why.

* * *

Well why not? It's certainly in the public interest to know the grounds on which some of these fine young Hercules have been exempted while their more anemic neighoors have been thrust into uniform.

* * *

A man who has been deferred by reason of his occupation, his health or because of dependency has no cause to be ashamed of it or to protest the posting of his name and the cause of his deferment.

* * *

The protests will come from the frauds and the fakes—the draft dodgers who are hiding behind some flimsy pretext which won't bear the light of publicity.

* * *

You can reach out in almost any direction in any community in the country and touch some lad who hasn't as much claim to exemption from military service as his grandmother.

* * *

And sometimes his claim is his grandmother.

Chieftains Taboo 4th Term Talk, Decide on Effort to Hold Senate

WASHINGTON—Democratic party chieftains have secretly decided on two major points of strategy for the 1944 election campaign.

First—not to talk about a fourth term for President Roosevelt. The strategy is, "Mum's the word" regarding the president. Speeches by prominent Democrats urging him to run again will be taboo from now on.

Second—Democratic leaders have decided to concentrate activities during the campaign on keeping a two-thirds majority in the senate to support the president on the peace treaty. (The house does not vote on treaties.)

It passed unnoticed, but there was a tell-tale illustration of the "no fourth term talk" strategy at a recent dinner in Philadelphia for the Democratic organization of Eastern Pennsylvania. New Deal Senator Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania, made an all-out 4th term speech, but three speakers who followed him—Democratic National Chairman Frank Walker, Attorney General Francis Biddle and former Representative Joseph Casey, a White House adviser—didn't breathe a word about a 4th term.

Walker's recent trip through the nation, made to tap political sentiment, convinced him that it will be very difficult for the Democrats to retain their slim majority in the house next year.

That is why Walker and his associates have decided to concentrate on the senate. In doing so, Walker will not hesitate to cross party lines and support Republican candidates (behind the scenes, of course) who can be counted on to back up the president's peace policies.

One GOP candidate the Democratic leadership will definitely support is Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth college, who will run against isolationist Senator Charles Tobey in the New Hampshire Republican primary next year.

Healthful Travel.

AS Vice President Wallace was saying good-bye on his trip to South America, he asked Mrs. Laurence Duggan, wife of the state department's, Latin American expert who was accompanying him:

"Mrs. Duggan, is there anything you want me to do for your husband?"

"Mr. Vice President," replied Mrs. Duggan tactfully, "my husband is a man who needs a lot of sleep."

On the trip which followed, however, neither Duggan nor Wallace got much sleep. They were on the go night and day—receptions, speeches, plane hops, more receptions, more speeches. However, when they arrived home both looked extremely well. Bronzed as an Inca Indian, Wallace had lost ten pounds, never was in better health.

Since then he has been getting up around 5:30 every morning to transplant vegetables in his sister's garden. She and her husband, the Swiss minister, live not far from Wallace's hotel, and he goes by there every morning for an hour's work before breakfast.

A farmer all his life, Henry misses the feel of the earth on his fingers.

Surplus Sailors.

WAR Shipping administration has been nursing an internal dispute over the vexatious problem of providing seamen for the new Liberty ships. Two or three officials are resigning, others are writing memos in a high state of emotion.

According to their heated charges, WSA is training thousands of apprentices for non-existent jobs, is holding these young draftage men idle, and is conspiring to drive the maritime unions from the sea.

According to one confidential memo, written by pro-labor officials inside the War Shipping administration, the Training Division has been overstaffed in a frantic effort to build a backlog of 10,000 men for martime training, before the army, navy or draft boards can get their hands on them, largely to head off the unions.

The charge is that if the ships are manned with new men, they will be more tractable, and will follow the "service line" rather than the "labor line."

In broad outlines, the ruction is an expression of the mutual distrust existing between maritime unions and the navy. The WSA training program is bringing thousands of new seamen into the industry who threaten to upset union domination.

In fact so many trainees have been brought in that thousands of them are cooling their heels, waiting for berths which cannot be provided, because sixty per cent of all crews must be experienced men.

Meantime, pro-Union WSA officials cleam that many trained and experienced seamen in other jobs are not being called to maritime service. They are union members.

"It is fairly clear," says one memo, "that the Training Division opposes the infusion into the Merchant Marine of anything but new blood of its own peculiar type, count and color. The question is, why?"

This indignant official answers the question as follows: "If it is because the independent character of the experienced American merchant seaman is subversive to the best interests of the American Merchant Marine, then the majority of the men who sail the ships today are right in suspecting that the government is building a reserve of more tractable men to drive them from the sea."

Note: When officer candidates finish training at the Maritime schools at Ft. Trumbull, Conn., or Alameda, Cal., there is such a backlog of waiting officers that they are permitted, if not encouraged, to travel home at government expense for vacation.

How America Infantrymen Regain Strength By Rest Period After Four Days of Battle.

Editor's Note: This is the third of several dispatches from Ernie Pyle describing his experiences with an American infantry battalion in action west of Mateur, northern Tunisia.

THE FRONT LINES BEFORE MATEUR—(By Wireless)—After four days in battle the famous infantry outfit that I'm with sat on its newly won hill and took two days' rest while companion units on each side of it leap-frogged ahead.

The men dig in on the back slope of the hill before any rest begins. Everybody digs in. This is an inviolate rule of the commanding officers and nobody wants to disobey it. Every time you pause, even if you think you're dying of weariness, you dig yourself a hole before you sit down.

The startling thing to me about these rest periods is how quickly the human body can recuperate from critical exhaustion, how rapidly the human mind snaps back to the normal state of laughing, grousing, yarn-spinning, and yearning for home.

HERE is what happens when a unit stops to rest.

My unit stops just after daybreak on Hill 394. Foxholes are dug, outposts placed, phone wires strung on the ground. Some patrol work goes on as usual. Then the men lie down and sleep till the blistering heat of the sun wakes them up.

After that you sit around in bunches recounting things. You don't do much of anything. The day just easily kills itself.

That first evening is when life begins to seem like Christmas Eve. The mail comes up in jeeps just before dark. Then comes the men's blanket rolls. At dark hot food arrives—the first hot food in four days.

This food is cooked in rolling kitchens several miles back and brought up by jeep, in big thermos containers, to the foot of the hill. Men carry the containers, slung on poles over their shoulders, up goat paths in the darkness to all parts of the mountain.

Hot food and hot coffee put life in a man, and then in a pathetic kind of contentment, you lie down and you sleep. The all-night crash of the artillery behind you is completely unheard through your weariness.

There are no mosquitoes so far in the mountains, and very few fleas, but there are lots of ants.

Hot food arrives again in the morning, before daylight. You eat breakfast at 4 a. m. Then begins a day of reassembling yourself.

Word is passed that mail will be collected that evening, so the boys sit on the ground and write letters. But writing is hard, for they can't tell in their letters what they've just been through.

The men put water in their steel helmets and wash and shave for the first time in days. A few men at a time are sent to the creek in the valley to take baths. The remainder sit in groups on the ground talking, or individually in foxholes cleaning their guns, reading, or just relaxing.

A two-months-old batch of copies of the magazine Yank arrives and a two-weeks-old bunch of the Stars and Stripes. Others read detective magazines and comic books that have come up with their bedrolls.

At noon everybody opens cans of cold C-ration. Cold coffee in five-gallon water cans is put in the sun to warm.

Soldiers cut each other's hair. It doesn't matter how it looks, for they aren't going anywhere fancy, anyhow. Some of them strip nearly naked and lie on their blankets for a sunbath. By now their bodies are tanned as though they had been wintering at Miami Beach. They wear the inner part of their helmets, for noonday sun is dangerous.

Their knees are skinned from crawling over rocks. They find little unimportant injuries that they didn't know they had. Some take off their shoes and socks and look over their feet, which are violently purple with athlete's-foot ointment.

I SIT around with them, and they get to telling stories, both funny and serious, about their battle. They are all disappointed when they learn I am not permitted to name the outfit they're in, for they are all proud of it and would like the folks at home to know what they've done.

"We always get it the toughest," they say. "This is our third big battle now since coming to Africa. The Jerry is really afraid of us now. He knows what outfit we are, and he doesn't like us."

Thus they talk and boast and laugh and speak of fear. Evening draws down and the chill sets in once more. Hot chow arrives just after dusk.

And then the word is passed around. Orders have come by telephone.

There is no excitement, no grouching, no eagerness either. They had expected it.

Quietly they roll their packs, strap them on, lift their rifles and fall into line.

There is not a sound as they move like wraiths in single file down tortuous goat paths, walking slowly, feeling the ground with their toes, stumbling and hushfully cussing. They will walk all night and attack before dawn.

They move like ghosts. You don't hear or see them three feet away. Now and then a light flashes lividly from a blast by our big guns, and then for just an instant you see a long slow line of dark-helmeted forms silhouetted in the flash.

Then darkness and silence consume them again, and somehow you are terribly moved.

Farmer's Diary

PIG TALE

WE BROUGHT a little pig, just seven weeks old, home to the pen in the barn. (The fat hogs were disposed of, via sugar cure.) She is a spotted little rascal with an extra curl in her tail. We hope she will eventually make a good mother.

She seemed so small in the big pen all alone that our inclination, as a family, was to pet her. I looked through a crack and saw the two smallest boys on their knees with the pig grunting contentedly, between them.

"Do you realize," remarked the five year-old to his brother, "that when you scratch its back that makes it like you better? And when it grunts like that, it means what a kitten says when it purrs."

I went away, and was tending a kettle of hot lard when the pig got out. The two boys chased after it, around the barn, but the pig ran like all possessed. I was not much surprised when they presently returned to say that it had squirmed under the fence into a neighbor's pasture.

When the lard was finished, I searched the adjoining field, called and listened, but found no little porker. After school, the oldest boy, on his bike, rode around the square and asked neighbors to be on the lookout.

Two days passed. "A fox, or some other wild animal, might have eaten it," I told the children.

That afternoon a neighbor stopped to say that a stray little pig had eaten bread and milk with the cat and dog on a farm in the next valley. We drove two miles to the place and found our pig — ridiculously at home with a dozen big Chester Whites.

It took three of us to corner her and get her into a poke. She had traveled through Honey Creek, across a fenced highway, through a woods and over a hilly range. She has, doubtless, learned that the world is wide, and free and not unfriendly. Now I barred the door and the children jump across the manger to feed and pet her.

'BEAUTY SHOPS WILL NOT CURE ABSENTEEISM'

That's Verdict of 'Industry Doctors' Who Check on Worker Problems.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO — Three doctors warned their first industrial patients today that it takes more than factory beauty shops, juke boxes, and nurseries to cure their employes of absenteeism.

"You've just been given symptomatic treatment, like using cold packs to reduce fever," they said. "You have not got down to causes."

The doctors are W. Lloyd Warner, Ph. D., Burleigh B. Gardner, Ph. D., and Robert J. Havinghurst, Ph. D., all of the University of Chicago, who have hung out their shingle in downtown Chicago to put their academic theories into practice.

The patients were the first clients the new firm, which Warner, Gardner and Havinghurst call the "committee on personnel problems." The professors, all authorities on human behavior, are making the results of their research available to industry at a fee. Most of the profits will be used to carry on more research.

Simply giving more employe "benefits" is not enough to win the battle against absenteeism, the professors said.

"Too many industries are setting up beauty shops, laundries and nurseries for their employes and still not licking the absentee menace."

Acting on their theory that "the behavior of the individual is largely the expression of his place in social arrangements," the professors recommended that these industries turn the spotlight on the work situation itself.

There, they said, often can be found causes for absenteeism. One big cause is organizational inefficiency. If the employes know the job is not running well, they are likely to take time off because they think it doesn't matter.

Other causes "disturbing the set-up of human relationship," they said, include:

(1) Rotating shifts every two weeks, which is too often because it takes a day or so for a worker to adjust himself to new hours.

(2) Foremen are so busy with details they have no time for the employes, who feel unimportant.

(3) The plant has no system of excused absences which would permit a certain amount of "planned absences."

The professors told the executives they should keep in mind that overlooking people is just as serious as forgetting to oil machinery.

"A good prescription," they said, "would be one dose of efficiency and two of understanding—daily."

Baby Giant Panda Celebrates Her Second Birthday

NEW YORK —(INS)— Pan-Dah, baby giant panda at the Bronx zoo, celebrated her second birthday recently without fanfare.

It was a rainy day and Pan-Dah frolicked with her mate, Pan-Dee, who will celebrate his anniversary in two months.

The pandas originally were sent from Tibet as Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's gift to the United China Relief. Upon arriving at the zoo Pan-Dee tipped the scales at 101 pounds, while Pan-Dah weighed 87.

But Pan-Dah apparently didn't believe that ladies should be slender because in one year she gained 116 pounds while Pan-Dee was adding 92. They still are on a bamboo and corn meal mush diet, but Pan-Dah eats 17 stalks of bamboo to her mate's five.

The pandas have become used to the New York climate and have been allowed outdoors in all kinds of weather, except rainy and sleety days. They like snow and enjoyed rolling about in it. Last year they were allowed outdoors only in mild weather.

Soldiers Worship

Historic Basilica of St. Crispine in Tebessa, Algeria, now partly in ruins, is a favorite place of worship of U. S. soldiers, shown above leaving Sunday services there. St. Crispine, daughter of a Roman proconsul in Tebessa, was beheaded in 304 A. D. for being a Christian.

Conditions In Poland Revealed By Escaped Pole

LONDON — (INS) — A man who has just escaped to London from Warsaw and Bialystok today shed new light on conditions in those Polish cities. His name is known to the Polish government but cannot be revealed as he has relatives in Poland. This is what he has to say.

"Everywhere are seen deserted or burned down houses, ruined railway stations and tracks, overturned railroad cars. It was noticeable that women were very shabbily dressed and were doing the heaviest kind of work—the kind that formerly was done only by men.

"In Warsaw nearly every house bears traces of damage, especially in Praga, around the royal castle, the primate's palace, the opera, etc.

"Black market prices are as follows: about $2.00 a quart for milk, and about $6.00 a pound for any kind of meat.

"The buying power of the zloty has been reduced to about 3 per cent of its pre-war value. (Before the war there were about 5 zlotys to a dollar). Prices in restaurants reserved for Germans are normal, but in restaurants for Poles they are unlimited by any restrictions.

CHEATS DEATH

Wooster Man Near Drowning Victim at Savannah.

ASHLAND—Veteran of Japanese imprisonment and many other adventures since he went to China as a missionary in 1902, Dr. Herman Bryan of Wooster escaped death many times only to come near meeting it in a tiny lake in northern Ashland county where he barely escaped drowning Tuesday.

Dr. Bryan was fishing in Savannah lake when he fell out of the boat, clad in a heavy overcoat which threatened to carry him to the bottom. He managed to cling to the side of the boat and call for help, attracting Glenn Gantz, boat caretaker at the lake, who heard the call.

Gantz rowed to the missionary's aid but Dr. Bryan proved too heavy to be lifted into the boat so Gantz tied a rope around him and finally managed to heave him into the boat. Dr. Bryan told his rescuer that a leg became cramped. He lost his balance and fell into the water, he said.

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

STOCKHOLM—(By Wireless)—As one Swedish official here said to me, Sweden has learned that to live as a small power is a different thing from trying to live as a big power.

The old trouble that has plagued Europe has been the attempt of small countries to become bigger, to scheme and plot and go to war for more territory. They have not learned the lesson Sweden has learned. It was learned here in a very hard way years ago, when Sweden dreamed of being the giant power of the north.

Clapper

From Viking times the Swedes looked to the east, organized expeditions and sought trade in what is now Russia, where they established a government. In fact, Swedes say the name Russia is of Swedish origin.

Sweden was a warlike nation for centuries, fighting almost constantly with Russia, Poland and Denmark to dominate the Baltic and the north. King Gustavus Adolphus, Sweden's greatest hero, was killed in battle in Germany. King Charles XII conquered Denmark and Poland and invaded Russia.

But over the years Sweden gradually found that wars did not pay, and that another way of existence was possible, which during the last century of peace has enabled Sweden to become a model abode of freedom and economic security. The Swedes have found that a nation can be happy, prosperous and respected without being big or warlike

Instead of conquering territory, the Swedes learned to send ships with fine products all over the world. They advanced through technical skill instead of force of arms. They won markets by craftmanship and enterprise instead of by guns. So it is that the Swedes can say to me that Sweden has learned to live as a small power.

Finland's woes arise partly, though not entirely, out of a failure to learn that lesson.

Sweden knows now that so long as there is no world security she is in danger That was the burden of the May day remarks of Premier Hansson. As leader of the Social Democratic party and successor to Branting, he was long a pacifist and opposed military expenditures. But in the last few years he has had to reverse his position and take measures to provide defenses for Sweden, which are now considerable.

Premier Hansson warns his people that Sweden is in an exposed and precarious situation simply because of her geographical position, which lies near possible paths of attack and strategical regions. Swedish hopes for the safety of the north were shattered in April, 1940—that is, when the Germans attacked Norway.

Sweden's position now, as authoritatively stated, is that she will try to continue her neutrality and to remain out of the war. But this does not mean Sweden will neglect her rights and obligations just for the sake of peace Premier Hansson says the Swedish defense force is prepared to intervene when necessary and to use weapons to meet an act of violence so that Swedish neutrality may be respected That is plainly addressed to Germany, as a result of the recent Nazi firing on a Swedish submarine. It is significant that Hansson has repeated his warning that, if attacked Sweden will resist with all her force. The people were again notified on May day that in such case they must fight, and were warned not to believe any Quislings who might appear.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

PHOENIX, Ariz—Phil Tovrea, one of the largest independent meat packers in the country who formerly packed about 90 per cent of the meat for the soldiers in Arizona and, in normal times, supplied about 55 per cent of the civilian demand, has reduced his volume to 25 per cent of normal Of that reduced amount, 40 per cent now goes to the army, which one way and another, has large and hungry forces in the state, and the rest to the hotel and restaurant trade He sends no meat whatever to the retail butcher shops. He formerly killed about 1200 head a week.

Pegler

Mr. Tovrea curtailed his operations in a rather spectacular way He telegraphed the Arizona delegation in Washington that he was losing about $20 a head on his kill because there is a ceiling on his prices but no ceiling on the price of cattle on the hoof and ran double-truck ads in the leading Arizona papers explaining his position to the public

I sense that the public does not clearly understand and the same goes for me although I have interviewed two independents in Arizona and one of the big national packers in Chicago but I do detect some skepticism concerning Mr. Tovrea's losses. One-fourth of his normal kill would be 300 head a week now and at the rate of $20 a head his loss would be $6,000 a week. It is a little hard to believe that he would continue to take that loss just to keep his hand in.

The explanation may be however that he has other interests which would help him to stay in action. He processes cottonseed and makes lint for explosives and cottonseed meal and extracts for oil for shortening and he also buys and fattens range cattle in this phase of his operations, he gets the benefit of the unrestricted price of meat on the hoof which he complains of in his role of packer.

The cattle on the range in southern Arizona, and in Sonora, Mexico, is terribly sorry, scrawny stock, somewhat worse than usual just now because of the drought last year The poor brutes are weak and bony from undernourishment and it is necessary to ship them to grass to put enough meat on them to make them worth killing.

Mr. Tovrea says there is a lot of ofhand slaughtering by thieves on the trails off in the desert and some of the cowboys have resumed carrying guns but there have been no reports of any shooting between the cowhands and rustlers. Rather than rustling, they call it stealing now because the thieves apparently just knock off an occasional steer in an isolated place, cut it up in chunks and hide it under their gleanings of desert firewood in their old jaloppies

Rustling was a large-scale operation and rustled cattle were not butchered on the spot but added to the rustlers' herds. Mr Tovrea says a lot of this stolen meat is being sold in black markets but neither I nor any friend who has been up against the meat shortage in Arizona has discovered any black market among the local butcher shops. Indeed, most of the shops have very little meat at all and the biggest retailer in Tucson says there have been whole weeks in which he didn't have more than a few pounds for his customers.

Chickens are not plentiful at any time and on a recent Saturday night in Tucson there was a line of customers like that at an old-time world series inching toward a store where two colored men were killing and cleaning chickens in a gory mess following the unexpected arrival of a truckload of them in crates

The beef shortage for the retail trade has been slightly relieved lately by shipments from the east but that seems to be an emergency supply sent in to make up for Tovrea's withdrawal from the trade and he predicts that there will be a beef famine in the west by September on the basis of fat cattle now on hand and in prospect. One of the largest retail dealers with long experience and plenty of knowledge about the supply says he thinks so too, but blames the drought as well as the absence of a ceiling on the price of live cattle.

Nobody who examines Mr Tovrea's motives for doing as he has done will get very far with any doubt concerning his patriotism On the mantel shelf of his home which, incidentally is right beside and almost inside his packing house, is the picture of a young American army flier, his son who was knocked down in the Dieppe raid and is now a prisoner of war in Germany. Another son also an officer, is married to the sister of Lt Comdr Eddie or Butch O'Hare the navy flier who knocked down six Japanese planes in one day and received the Medal of Honor

OPA CALLS FOR BROADENING OF RATION SYSTEM

Sees Cut of 15 to 20 Per Cent In Consumer Goods and Services This Year.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—A report prepared by the WPB planning committee today forecast a 15 to 20 per cent decline in consumer goods and services this year and recommended extension of consumer rationing "as far as staff and experience permit"

Asserting that "everyone will suffer loss or, at least, discomfort in 1943," the report stated:

"The per capita flow of goods and services to consumers is expected to fall between 10 and 15 per cent below 1942. In the second half of the year, the drop may be as great as 20 per cent overall.

"In clothing and furniture, the decline may be even greater. In a few cases—household and motor fuels, transportation and domestic service—supplies may well fall below minimum requirements, unless the distribution of available supplies is managed with great efficiency."

The committee outlined a six-point program to meet the situation.

1 Eliminate civilian manufacturing and as much of wholesaling as possible from labor shortage areas.

2 Increase productivity of retail trades and service industries with emphasis upon localities where labor is short.

3. Curtail less essential goods and services and simplify and standardize the more essential

4 Extend consumer rationing as far as staff and experience permit.

5 Protect the consumer's minimum requirements in every important area.

6 Make the public understand the program.

The report, prepared before the appointment of Arthur D Whiteside, president of Dun and Bradstreet as WPB vice chairman in charge of civilian requirements said that there was an "acute need" for a top programming or requirements body asserting that "the proliferation of czars" serves only the useful purpose of intensifying efforts in areas where critical bottlenecks have developed.

WPB's job ahead the committee asserted, is to free resources for munitions production protect basic civilian requirements, use resources left for civilians to provide shelter, warmth clothing, sustenance, health and morale, and distribute civilian goods fairly and equitably

(By Associated Press)

LAFOLLETTE, Tenn—Eighteen coal miners, huddling behind a hastily erected canvas barrier nearly 2,000 feet underground, survived an explosion that rocked the Etna Coal and Coke company mine and suffocated ten of their companions

The miners fighting against the deadly fumes of "black damp" for more than eight hours, stumbled and crawled from their barricaded cell last night as rescue parties freed them

Two other miners, who had joined the barricaded group, became panic-stricken and dashed from their enclosure to death from carbon monoxide fumes 400 feet away.

The explosion thundered through the east Tennessee soft coal mine yesterday afternoon, rocking it from tipple to the deepest seam

The dead miners were identified as Cecil Foust, John Pelezzari, Dan Garrett, George Douglas, Lawrence Hale, Albert Kitts, Lewis White Homer Martin, Oscar Ayres and Ernest Riggs

Two miners who were almost outside the mine tunnel when the blast occurred were burned critically Three others in another section of the mine escaped injury

A coal mine official said the disaster, the worst in Tennessee since 1926, probably resulted from ignition of gaseous fumes. However, mine bookkeeper R. B Parrott said a test by inspectors yesterday morning revealed no traces of gas.

RACKETEER, PAL MOWED DOWN BY GANG SHOTGUNS

2 Others Wounded In Chicago Shooting Linked To Feud In Underworld.

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO—Danny Stanton, labor racketeer and former Al Capone hoodlum, and a companion, Louis Dorman, were shot to death early today in a smoothly-executed assassination reminiscent of the dramatic gangland murders of the prohibition era.

Two other men were wounded as shotguns roared in a southside Chicago tavern shortly after midnight.

They are Louis "Cy" Shapiro and "Big Mouth" Charles O'Brodorf, the latter a known associate of Stanton.

The murders, as reconstructed by police, were planned with all the care and executed with all the precision that once marked the gangland wars when Capone held sway for years by killing off his rivals.

Stanton, lately known as Chicago's No. 1 public enemy, was shot down by gunmen as he stood at the bar of the 6500 club owned by Harry Preyner sipping beer with Dorman.

A few moments later, police supervisor Andrew Barry was told, O'Brodorf was seen running from the place, his face covered with streaming blood.

Stanton's assassins entered through a side door and their presence was not noted until their shotguns began blasting.

Other gang members were reported stationed at the front door, concealed in the space between the outer and inner doors These opened fire on Shapiro when he sought to escape that way, felling him with shotgun slugs in the shoulder and arm.

Shapiro, although he was believed to have been standing with Stanton and the others, declared he did not even know the gangster.

Police, after hours of investigation, still were unable to say how many were in the gang that carried out the assassinations. Some persons said there were six. Others said they saw only four.

Investigators worked on a half dozen possible motives for the murders, among them that the killings may have resulted from gambling feuds from union racketeering, possibly from some grudge held over from prohibition days, or because Stanton was trying to seize the power of the old Capone syndicate.

Learn How to Brush Teeth Vigorously

By MME. QUI VIVE

Every woman enjoys creaming her face; it makes her feel righteous and the cosmetic smells nice. Arranging the hair is no task, if one has a permanent that qualifies. The average woman likes to put the rosy glow on her fingernails. But she hates to wash her teeth. How do I know? I made a survey.

There's nothing inspiring about it; it is just something one has to do. A dentist tells me that few individuals scour the teeth properly. The outer surfaces are treated, but the sides and inner portions get only a lick and a promise. He can tell by the coloring of the mouth pearls. Our biters, he assures me, should not only be kept clean; the should be polished so they will shine.

Brushing should take place as soon as possible after each meal and at bedtime. Certain food elements ferment, produce chemicals that act unfavorably upon the dentine, and they do it in a hurry. After gorging on candy, a practice of some of our nicest, wisest ladies, have an extra scouring. Sugar does no harm if it is speedily removed. As it adheres to the membranes of the mouth the brushing should be followed by the use of a lotion.

Swish it around vigorously. A salt and soda solution is recommended for the purpose.

Prolonged mastication of food will help keep the teeth clean and the gums free of bacteria. So eat your bread crusts, munch raw carrots, turnips, celery.

When the gums bleed they are not in normal, healthy condition. Poor circulation may be the cause, in which case you should massage the gums with a finger that has been dipped in a dentifrice. Another source is the formation of tartar which presses against them, creeping up underneath, causing the flesh to recede. This hard substance cannot be removed with the brush. The dentist has to dig it out. It is one of several reasons why one should seek professional attention every six months.

Economize on clothes, if you must, watch the grocery bill, do everything to save money, but don't fail to have your teeth repaired. Infected teeth can cause serious damage to other parts of the body.

When teeth are set apart, small particles of food will lodge in the spaces. If not promptly removed the heat and moisture of the mouth, acting upon these particles, cause decomposition that produces an unpleasant breath. Acid fermentations dig caries in course of time. If the brush does not remove particles of food resort to the toothpick or use dental floss. But be gentle. Floss, used carelessly, can make wounds in the flesh.

Tomorrow's Problem.

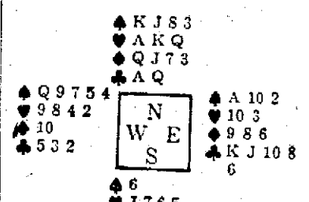
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

DIFFERENCE IN LEADS

Your purpose, when you lead against a No Trump game contract, is to build up as many as five tricks for your side, if possible. That is why it usually pays to open your longest suit then, especially if you have any side entries or a fairly solid suit, as it is necessary to take quite a number of tricks. Against a slam contract, your problem is different. Then you want to give yourself the best possible chance to gain one trick for your side, if it is a grand slam, and two tricks if it is a small one.



(Dealer: North Neither side vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	4 ♦	Pass
6 NT

Many different kinds of bidding came on this deal of a pair duplicate. Those who reached 6-Diamonds had a breeze, losing only to the spade A when it got forced by the spade J finesse, the only play which involved any particular uncertainty.

Where 3-No Trumps became the contract, six-odd got made in most cases, as the natural lead of East was the club J, making possible two tricks in that suit at the outset.

Some of the 6-No Trumps declarers, who were obviously shooting for tops because it was a match-point game, took 11 tricks and some of them 12, the difference being caused by East's lead. Where the club was opened, 12 tricks came in. That was bad bridge. East should have reckoned that the best chance to beat the contract was by means of his spade A and the club K, and that under-leading the latter card might build up a vital trick for the declarer.

What should East have led, then, against 6-No Trumps? With the bidding chronicled, and with most bidding possible on the deal, the tentative lead of the heart 10 would be chosen by most fine players, as, probably costing nothing and as enabling East to wait with his trick-takers, hoping the declarer had no way to end-play him.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I hurried back to John Hayes with the reassuring message from my father, then bade him adieu, glad to note his relief from terror and humiliation. As I went to my bedroom door I met Katharine.

"I heard everything," she said, "and I deduce, from the fact that your father did not see fit to join the conference, that you have the situation well in hand."

There was the same lilt in her voice which had been there when I told her of Jack's consent that she come down to the hideaway.

"So now," she went on, the eagerness in her voice pathetically child-like, "there is no reason why we cannot talk about Jack, and determine when I can see him."

Spencer Must Decide.

I gave her a steadying, half-reproachful look.

"As I have told you before," I said, "that decision rests with my father."

"Oh, I know that," she said, "and I also know that I can see Jack for only a little while. I shall have to come back here to keep up the fiction about Mary's strained ankle."

I nodded absent acquiescence, for I knew my father was not yet ready to take Redfield into custody, thus freeing Mary from the necessity of further pretense.

Yet it seemed "cruel and mediaeval punishment" to vouchsafe Jack and Katharine only a brief glimpse of each other.

"You're thinking great thoughts," Katharine said suddenly. "Give out."

"Is there anything about that treatment of Mary's supposed injury that I couldn't be taught to do?" I asked.

Madge Has a Plan.

"Not a thing," she said, with a gleam of hope in her eyes. "But you know I'm supposed to be with Mary every minute Noel isn't with her, and that your father doesn't want this apartment left alone, ever."

"It wouldn't have to be," I said. "Dicky can take over here."

"I thought he had to be at the Underwood apartment with Harry."

"He is supposed to be, but I can see no reason why Ronald, who is always there anyway, cannot act as reception clerk and telephone operator when Harry has to go away. After all, the only reason someone has to be always on guard at the Underwood house is because a message from Marion might come in, and you can be very sure Ronald will not fail in that mission."

"No, poor boy!" Katharine said. Then she sprang to my side, put one cupped hand under my chin and turned my face toward hers.

Katharine Grateful.

"You blessed girl!" she said. "You're planning it so that I can be with Jack for awhile, aren't you? Oh, Madge, darling!"

She dropped her hand and turned blindly away, but I swept her into my arms and pillowed her head against my shoulder.

"Don't break down now," I adjured her, "when your goal is so nearly in sight. Yes, I am planning some way so that you and Jack can be together at the hideaway for awhile. But you must face one unpleasant fact first."

"And what is that?" she asked.

"I am sure my father will not wish to let you go until after this matter of Ruth Hayes is cleared up."

Urges 3-Year Extension of Reciprocal Trade Program

MAJORITY OF PANEL ASKS FULL UNITY

Urges Party Lines Be Dropped In Vote; Minority Report Not Yet Released.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — A 3-year extension of the administration's reciprocal trade agreements program—not only to build America's trade but as a means of securing world peace and preventing another global war—was recommended today in a majority report of the house ways and means committee.

Appealing for an adjournment of politics on the issue, the report concluded that:

1. It is desirable to continue in existence this tested and sound instrument of international cooperation, in the interest both of unity in the war effort, of a secure peace hereafter, and of American prosperity.

2. It is desirable to make the vote as large and as bipartisan as possible, in order that our Allies and the citizens of the United States may be assured that international cooperation in the postwar reconstruction is not a party matter.

3. It is desirable that the extension be in the form and for the term that has formerly been used, in order that no unnecessary doubts be created.

A bill to extend the pact-making authority was approved by the committee, 14 to 11, with all 10 Republican members and Rep. West (D., Tex.) voting against the measure. A minority report will be issued later.

Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts said yesterday debate on the measure would begin Monday with a vote expected Tuesday.

vide draft boards with written evidence of the essentiality of fathers in their employ.

The boards will be advised of the registrant's employment in an essential activity and the employer will receive notice when boards begin reclassifying fathers from 3-A to make them available for military service.

Although Gen. Hershey said that induction of men with children probably will be necessary in four months if future calls are to be met, local draft clerks could not estimate when such a move will become necessary here.

Some fathers already are being drafted, but they are among those in "non-deferrable" occupations and an unstated number who left agricultural pursuits for which they had been deferred. Others are those who have become fathers since Dec. 8, 1941.

Calls of the three Richland county boards for men in May and June are materially lighter than in previous months board attaches said today. The number sought from board one is not quite half as great as that in last month's call, which could not be met owing to late changes in regulations which brought about deferment of some that had been on eligibility lists.

REFUSED OIL

WPB Ruling Worries City on Road Dust Problem.

Turned down by the War Production board in an attempt to get a substitute oiling material for unpaved streets, city officials were to confer today with Carl H Stander, Mansfield contractor on the next step to obtain dust-prevention materials.

City Engineer W. C. Statler said residents on unpaved streets may have to contend with dust this summer unless the WPB gives the city priority for the asphalt base material the city wants. Standard road oil is unavailable this year.

Statler said the city is trying to stay away from the use of calcium chloride which "wears out" too quickly and is damaging to the finish of automobiles.

PARLIAMENTARY UNION URGED

WASHINGTON — (AP) — President Enrique Penaranda of Bolivia suggested to congress today an American inter-parliamentary union "to strengthen our ties of friendship and undestanding."

The soldier-statesman leader of the second South American country to join the United Nations as a fighting partner against the Axis addressed the house of representatives at noon.

In his address to congress, Penaranda said "now that an era of closer political, cultural and economic interchange has, fortunately, been initiated, it is the task of the law-making bodies of the world to strengthen our ties of friendship and understanding."

TREASURY IN NEW FIGHT ON RUML TAX PLAN

Opposes System as Senators Open Battle Over New Levy Measure.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The senate tax battle opened today with the treasury again opposing the Ruml plan to wipe out all 1942 income taxes and put all taxpayers on a 100 per cent pay-as-you-go basis.

Randolph Paul, treasury general counsel, told the senate finance committee that the treasury still favored the Doughton plan which the house refused to accept. The Doughton bill would wipe out about one-half of the national 1942 tax bill by recomputing 1942 income taxes on the 1941 basis. The effect would be graduated so that small taxpayers would be forgiven completely while big ones would be forgiven only about 10 per cent.

Next to the Doughton plan, Paul said, the treasury likes the Ford-Robertson bill which the house passed. This would cancel the normal 6 per cent income tax and the 13 per cent first-bracket surtax on all 1942 income—equal to about three-fourths of the 1924 tax total. It would put about 90 per cent of the taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis. The other taxpayers would be on a partial pay-go basis.

Paul contended the Ruml plan would be "inequitable" because it would cancel liability on both small incomes and on big incomes on which tax rates cannot be increased later because they already are so high.

Paul emphasized prompt action is important "in order to permit current collection to start by July 1 of this year." All the bills provide for a 20 per cent withholding tax on wages and salaries.

Of the 21 finance committee members, the eight Republicans and one Democrat are backing the Ruml plan so far.

time in his three terms that a legislature has refused to approve a major administration proposal.

Bricker repeated an earlier promise to veto any legislative attempt to spend the tax revenues saved by house action for any purpose other than postwar reserves.

Before killing the tax exemption by indefinite postponement committee members paraded pet exemptions and won assent to repeal of the levy of eight additional classifications of consumer goods.

Rep. Aaron T. Grad, R., Hamilton, chairman of the subcommittee which kept the measure bottled up for more than two months until a Republican caucus ordered committee hearings at the request of the governor, finally told the committee the whole measure should be killed "because we have eliminated the tax from numerous items without regard to revenues which would be lost by the state."

The senate yesterday voted 22-5 for a bill to impose special unemployment compensation surtaxes on industries whose payrolls have mushroomed because of war production, and sent the measure to the house.

As the bill passed the senate a surtax ranging from one-tenth of one per cent to one per cent would be levied upon payrolls of employers whose payrolls have increased 50 per cent or more over the average of the three previous years. New industries whose payrolls increased more than 50 per cent over the first year of operation also would pay the surtax. In no instance would the total tax exceed 3.5 per cent.

Ted F. Silvey of the Ohio CIO council charged the bill restricted rights of returned war veterans to unemployment compensation by comparsion with present provisions of the law. The bill also contained "a trick to prevent workers from filing benefit claims when they suffer two-or-three day layoffs," he said.

Sen. Fred G. Reiners, R., Hamilton, challenged these assertions, claiming that no exploitation of smaller industrys was possible under the bill.

The senate also approved revisions in a bill creating a 19-member post-war program commission to map building projects and other plans for return of veterans to civilian life.

As first passed by the senate, the commission would have comprised 15 members. The lieutenant governor, the director of the bureau of unemployment compensation and an additional member from each house of the legislature were added and appointment of four senators was given to the lieutenant governor instead of the senate president protem.

Provision for a $20,000 appropriation to the commission was untouched.

ASKS SCHOOLS, CHURCHES TO MARK 'I AM AN AMERICAN DAY'

Proclaiming Sunday, May 16, as "I Am An American Day," Mayor W. J. Locke today asked Mansfield churches and schools to plan special programs in recognition of persons who have recently become citizens by virtue of meeting naturalization requirements or reaching the required age.

Requests to participate in the observance were sent by the mayor to Supt. of Schools W. L. Miller as head of the Mansfield Americanization committee; Roy Spetka, assistant chairman; William Boniece, who is active in citizenship work, and to the Mansfield Ministerial association.

The schools were urged to plan special programs to honor new citizens and Mansfield pastors were invited to build their May 16 sermons around the benefits of American citizenship.

"Since we are all fighting to preserve the rights of American citizenship, I feel that proper emphasis should be given to this day by the people of Mansfield," the mayor's letter said.

Supports Shelby Action for Guard At Rail Crossing

Acting at the request of Frank Long, Shelby law director, Mayor W J Locke said today he would ask city council to pass a resolution seeking installation of flasher signals at the Baltimore & Ohio grade crossing southeast of Shelby where three Mansfielders lost their lives last Friday night.

Shelby council voted a resolution last week which asks the railroad to install flashers at the crossing, scene of a number of accidents in recent years. A copy of the Shelby resolution was received today by Mayor Locke.

The Richland County Auto club already has expressed willingness to push the campaign for flashers at the dangerous crossing. The club's request for flashers there three years ago was turned down, but reflector signs were erected then.

Mrs. Downard said today that she had received a letter from him dated April 13. It was written in London. She said he told of being a member of a fortress crew and that they were engaged at that time in daylight raids over Europe.

Mrs Shaaber enlisted in the WAAC early in April and is taking her primary training in Florida.

NO BIDDERS TO FEED PRISONERS

Receiving no response from an earlier request for bids on providing meals for city jail inmates, Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff today sent individual invitations to a number of Mansfield restaurants to bid on the meal service. Bids are scheduled to be opened next Monday.

Inmates of the city jail were moved to the county jail last week when Mrs. Eddie McNew, who had been preparing meals for the inmates, decided she could no longer supply the food at 40 cents a day per person.

LICENSES DUE

Richland county cigaret dealers as well as vending machines must have 1943 licenses by May 25, County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe warned today.

Approximately 400 licenses were sold in his office in 1942 with only a small percentage of that number having purchased the 1943 certificates. Retail licenses cost $25 while wholesale licenses are $100, he said.

MUST DECIDE WHAT TO DO ABOUT 'MYSTERY MAN'S' BAD MEMORY

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The house military affairs committee must decide now what to do about the "very bad memory" of John P. Monroe, whose lavish dinner parties at the "big red house on R street" have been the subject of investigation.

Chairman Andrew J. May, D., Ky., said that the committee would confer with counsel to consider advisability of contempt proceedings. Monroe couldn't recall names of "high new dealers" who allegedly warned him that an investigation of his social and business affairs was a smear campaign.

The best Monroe could do was to recollect that Sen. Ralph O. Brewster, R., Me., told him "they're going to do a job on you."

A motion to cite Monroe for contempt was made and seconded when he found he couldn't remember the names of his informants during an executive session of the committee. During an earlier open session he would not reveal the names because it "would violate a confidence," but agreed to tell the committee in executive session.

Monroe and his mysterious black-clad woman associate—Mrs. Eula Smith—will be called again next week, May said. The committee then will try to determine whether gay social events at 2101 R street had any connection with war contracts.

Mrs. Smith—who will be asked to explain $3,300 in checks paid her by a New Jersey war broker for "research"—was present throughout yesterday's hearing but remained in an office adjoining the committee room, in company with May's secretary.

"She's a lovely woman," May's secretary reported. "She invited me to come out to the R street house and see her."

Brewster and Bridges are not new dealers.

"I'm sorry but I've got a very bad memory," Monroe told the committee, "really I have."

and that Sen. Styles Bridges, R., N. H., had received "five anonymous phone calls about me."

CITY ARRESTS DROP IN APRIL

There was less business for Mansfield police in April with nine fewer arrests than in March and 13 fewer traffic accidents reported.

Officers arrested 80 persons last month, including four women, as against 79 men and 10 women in March, the monthly police report showed today.

Ten persons were injured in traffic mishaps in the city last month, two less than in March, while the city escaped without a traffic fatality in April. There was one death in the preceding month.

Traffic police issued 444 tickets for violations last month as compared with 637 in March. The April receipts from traffic tickets dropped to $487 from $676 in March.

Intoxication and traffic cases made up more than half the total number of arrests in April. Twenty-five arrests were made for intoxication and 20 for traffic violations.

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Al Wooley, individual high school bowling champion of the United States in 1942 off that telegraphic tournament in which Mansfield high school captured the national team title, isn't heaving the mineralite down the lanes these days.

Sore arm!

As a trainee in the merchant marine, Al is discovering that a shot in the arm is more than a figure of speech, and even though the shot isn't in the bowling arm it leaves little desire for strenuous activity.

Otherwise the life seems to be just what the doctor ordered for Al, who writes: "The shots are not so easy on the arms, and soon as our arms get well, or the stiffness starts going out, they give us a couple more shots.

"You can have all the sugar and butter you want here, and the chow is really good, and all you can eat.

"Up here the merchant marines are called the Draft Dodgers Navy, but we get along all right.

* * *

"I suppose," says Al, "the sport section of the News-Journal is getting kinda thin. We have every kind of sport here that it is possible to have on the base."

You're not just kiddin' it's getting thin, Al. And as soon as school is out it will get thinner yet. But I hope to be able to boondoggle my way through another summer, as ever.

And for those who'd like to drop Al a line, here's his address:

Jim Orr rushes forward with a correction on announced plans for the City "A" bowling league banquet to be held Sunday at 6:30.

"It will be at the Liederkranz club instead of the Eagles, and whoever told you it would be at the Eagles anyway?"

"Why, that was your Eagle teammate, Henry Heiser," I informed him.

"Well, Hank was wrong this time," says Jim. "It was originally scheduled at the Eagles where it has customarily been held in recent years, but the lodge wasn't too happy over the prospect of finding food for that big a crowd."

Senator Veteran Clicking

Alejandro Carrasquel Wins Three In Row.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

A LOT of pitching surprises, as well as surprising pitchers, have sprouted this spring in the major leagues, but none has been any more amazing than that young (?) man from Caracus, Senor Alejandro Carrasquel of the Washington Senators.

* * *

The big Venezuelan is listed in the record books as 29 years old, 30 next July, but in appearance he looks to be anywhere between 30 and 40 and his teammates say there is no telling exactly how old he really is.

* * *

Anyway, he has been with Washington for four years prior to this season without ever winning more than seven games. But big Alex has opened the 1943 campaign by whipping the Philadelphia Athletics three times to take his place among a select little group of hurlers who have won three games without a defeat.

Yesterday he beat them 8-1 on four hits and the only run against him came on an error in the ninth.

The New York Yankees remained on top of the A. L. by nosing out the Boston Red Sox 4-3 again in the ninth inning with the help of a balk by rookie Pitcher Anton Karl, who got excited when the Yanks loaded the bases and threw a pitch without having his feet on the rubber.

The second place Cleveland Indians divided a doubleheader with the Chicago White Sox. They won the first game 2-1 but dropped the nightcap 5-2 when Dick Culler, Sox rookie third baseman, singled two runs across in the 11th inning. Wally Moses stole home to add insult to injury.

* * *

Frank (Stubby) Overmire secured his place among the year's surprising new pitchers by holding the St. Louis Browns to four hits while the Detroit Tigers rapped out a 5-1 decision—their fourth straight over St. Louis this spring.

The Brooklyn Dodgers plowed the Philadelphia Phillies back into the National league cellar with an 18-6 drubbing on the strength of 23 hits good for a total of 30 bases.

The St. Louis Cardinals were set down 2-1 in 14 innings by the Chicago Cubs as what looked to be a sure doubleplay grounder took a bad hop over Second Baseman Jimmy Brown's head.

* * *

New York's groggy Giants swept a doubleheader from the Boston Braves 5-1 and 7-3 after Manager Mel Ott had benched himself and Babe Barna for weak hitting.

Bucky Walters pitched and batted Cincinnati to a 3-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates in a night game. He allowed only five hits and singled home two runs.

Wants Nothing But Champ In Las Vegas Fight Ring

LOS ANGELES— (U.P.) —So the man who wears cowboy boots, western frontier trousers and loud shirts said "Let's have a title fight in Las Vegas. I'll offer $25,000 and go higher if I have to."

* * *

That's the explanation of how and why Chuck Wergeles, manager of Lightweight Champion Beau Jack was sent a telegram offering $25,000 for Jack to meet Juan Zurita in a title bout at Las Vegas, Nev.

* * *

The New York fight crowd might have been surprised but veteran Las Vegas residents have learned to take their surprises in stride now that R. E. Griffith, whose business is building "resort" hotels, has landed.

Griffith has no visions of being a second Tex Rickard, who started from Goldfield with the Gans-Nelson fight and worked himself up to million dollar gates.

He knows little about fights but he is a man of decisions. A few weeks ago Los Angeles fight Manager George Parnassus brought Zurita to Las Vegas for a bout with a boy who didn't belong in the same ring and wasn't for any length of time.

"Now that Zurita is a fighter. He should have a chance to meet the champ By the way, who is the champ?"

Parnassus did not argue. Griffith called in John Cahlan, sports editor of the Las Vegas Review-Journal and had him word the wire to Wergeles.

To date, Griffith has received no answer from New York.

"If he doesn't answer by May 28, I'll have a man at Madison Square Garden when Beau Jack fights Bob Montgomery," Griffith said. "My man will have a certified $25,000 check in his pocket. He'll make the offer from the ring—if Mike Jacobs will let him in."

* * *

Should Montgomery defeat Jack then the offer will step right on up to Montgomery because Griffith chooses to deal only with champions.

Indians Split With Chisox

Rookie Reynolds Beaten In Eleventh Inning.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The cellar-dwelling Chicago White Sox yesterday spoiled the Cleveland Indians' chances to move into a first place tie with the New York Yankees.

Chubby Dean's clever pitching sparked the Tribe to a 2-1 victory in the first game of a bargain bill, but the Sox capitalized on Relief Hurler Allie Reynolds' wildness to capture the 11-inning nightcap, 5-2.

The Redskins complete their series with the Pale Hose at League park today and then board a train for St. Louis, where they will oppose the Browns four times in three days. Al Smith or Vernon Kennedy hurl the series finale today with Lefty Jake Wade the White Sox choice.

Despite his defeat, Reynolds made a good impression in his relief chore. He replaced Al Milnar when the Sox tied the score with a two-run blast in the third inning and he held them to two hits in the next seven stanzas.

The husky rookie lost his control in the 11th. He walked Moose Solters, Don Kolloway singled and Wally Moses also walked, filling the bases. Reynolds threw two quick strikes past Dick Culler, but the third baseman then singled and two runs scored. Moses added the other marker by stealing home.

In the first game, Dean limited the Chicagoans to six hits in eight and two-thirds innings.

WIN NIGHT GAME

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Bucky Walters is getting into the old rut, so maybe the Cincinnati Reds are going places this year.

In the old days when the Reds were champions or near same, Bucky could be depended on to knock in a couple of runs to win his own ball game if nobody else would do it for him. This the ace of the Red pitching staff did last night, for most of Cincinnati's 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Reds filled the bases for him in the second inning on singles by Gee Walker and Bert Haas and an intentional pass to Eric Tipton. Then Bucky singled to right field for two runs.

The winning run came in the seventh on Ray Mueller's double and Lonnie Frey's single.

Johnny Vander Meer will pitch tomorrow's twilight game against the Chicago Cubs.

DODGERS PICKED FOR COMMEMORATIVE TILT

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y.—(U.P.)—The Brooklyn Dodgers will represent the National league in baseball's annual commemorative contest at Doubleday Field on July 19.

The American league team has not yet been chosen, but the Chicago White Sox probably will be designated.

JOCKEY DIES

DETROIT— (AP) —Little Andy Minder, who rode Pink Star to victory in the 1907 Kentucky Derby, died here yesterday. He was 62.

Count Getting In on a Pass

Lightly Regarded as Yearling By Owner.

By SID FEDER

BALTIMORE — (AP) — Unless "The Fleet" hits a submerged mine (or vice versa) he's a cinch to become the sixth triple crown winner in all racing history this year—and the funniest part about it is that he's getting in on a pass.

* * *

Now, this is not taking a thing away from Count Fleet or his chances of following up his Kentucky Derby victory by cakewalking over two or three "escorts" in the Preakness Saturday here at old Pimlico, and waltzing in with the Belmont next month when he gets back to New York.

* * *

But, both the Count and his owner, Mrs. John D. Hertz, probably will be the first to admit that the rangy brown lightning streak is a pretty lucky fellow to come along after both the Pimlico and Belmont folks thought to open the back door.

This back door is a little stunt called the "supplementary nomination" which Alf Vanderbilt thought up when he was in the drivers' seat at both Pimlico and Belmont.

Before Alf dreamed up this one, an oat-burner was either named to a rich stake when it was time to send his name along as yearlings—or he sat that big waltz out. Alf figured there must be some gallopers who were just "guys named Joe" when they were little fellows, but who grew up to be rip-snorters — so why not permit them to be made eligible to a race when they grew up to be big boys simply by putting a little extra cash on the barrel-head as a penalty for coming to school late?

* * *

This idea was made to order for the Count, for Mrs. Hertz thought so little of him as a yearling two years ago that she wanted to sell him for $4,500.

* * *

Of course, it's going to cost him $1,500 as a supplementary Preakness nominee and $2,500 as a Belmont ditto — but at this writing that $4,000 outlay figures to net the Hertz hurricane about $80,000 for the two races.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK—(AP)—If congress passes a bill calling for a 20 per cent (or any other per cent withholding) tax, Al Weill wants to know if it would affect purses paid to boxers. . . . "I might wind up as the stakeholder for 20 per cent," says Al, who admits that a lot of guys in the fight racket might look at the dough as a stake for a couple of trips to the racetrack. . . . Ford Frick casts a negative vote in the campaign to give Capt. Eddie Grant, baseball's World War One hero, a place in the hall of fame at Cooperstown. . . . He just wasn't a good enough ball player, says the National league prexy. . . . When the Phillies persuaded the Reds to take back Gar Del Savio, the unreformed semi-pro shortstop, Bill Dooly, Philadelphia baseball scribe, explained: "They just returned him marked 'opened by mistake'."

TWO FOR THE BOOK.

When the Fort Sheridan, Ill., played the Benda Coal team of Berwyn, Ill., recently, not one of the six outfielders on the two teams registered a put-out. . . . The soldiers made only four hits, two of them scratched through the infield, but when they reported for practice the next day there was only one bat on hand and nobody used it except to knock 'em out for fielding practice.

SERVICE DEPT.

Lieut. Roy Riegels, former California grid captain, has moved up from special service officer at McClellan Field, Calif., to handle the same job for the entire area, including 14 sub stations. . . . Three former members of the Norfolk Naval Training station baseball team, Jim Gleeson, Walt Masterson and Ray Volpi, and Charles Medler, who didn't make the station team although he once pitched for Buffalo, have been transferred to a Pacific naval base, where they hope to organize a few ball clubs. . . . Commander Tom Hamilton, who organized the navy pre-flight athletic program, has had his request for a transfer to active duty granted after 19 months.

DEEP IN THE HEART OF—

Joe Burnett, former Penn end now at the Air Force Intelligence school at Harrisburg, Pa., tells this one. . . . He was an assistant coach at Camp Damell, Ga., last fall when a husky 250-pound farm boy turned out for practice. . . . Joe asked if he had any college, pro or high school experience, and the boy replied: "No, only semi-prairie ball."
